—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features, Syndicate, Inc.

SEVERAL events interest you, as you take care of your own corner of the world, and watch what goes on elsewhere.

A British airplane flew at the rate of 358 miles an hour, adding 36 miles an hour to the highest speed on record. That is progress.

Australia's government is defeated, and will probably resign because of an attempt to do away with government arbitration in labor disputes.

At the same time, Britain tries to establish arbitration to save such frightful losses to workers and employers as occurred in the recent cotton strike.

In North Carolina, organized bodies of men, scurrying through the State in automobile caravans, made raids upon union labor headquarters. They said they were "hunting for Red sympathizers." Public sympathy, there, is not with union labor.

If you are a bear, waiting for that "big smash in stocks" to make you rich, postpone your hopes, awhile.

Our Commerce Department says everything is going admirably. For the last quarter of this year, net earnings of corporations will run 25 per cent ahead of the same quarter in 1928. That means not a little money, but BILLIONS. We do things on a big scale.

With everything, from lunch counters to steel mills, incorporated, corporation earnings reflect national prosperity.

Russia's government, in the language of the late "Tad," "about as crazy as a fox," has bought up two American factories, one for watches, one for clocks, and will move them to Russia.

The blessing of the "dollar watch" is to be bestowed upon the peasant and the proletarian mechanic.

This country may wonder whether it is good to make temporary profit sending machinery to other countries to be used with cheap labor and cut down our exports.

Shoe machinery sent from the United States to the Argentine has reduced by millions a year New England's shoe trade with that country. In Japan, sending silk worms across the border was once punished with death. They still control the silk worms.

But our immigration laws forbid us to import the kind of men and women that have made this country what it is.

Since we can't import mechanics, we may have to export machinery.

The circus is now a trust. John Ringling having bought all of any size. The "What is It," Sacred White Elephant, Siamese Twins, Lady Bareback Rider will soon come out on the ticker in stock quotations, as they do in real life, on the sawdust.

The airplane moves forward. Commissioner Whalen, in charge of New York's police, organizes a sky patrol to arrest reckless fliers, while steamrollers are levelling a section of the park near Windsor Castle that will furnish an airplane landing for the Prince of Wales, who flies constantly.

Baltimore wishes the world to know that it is to be the world's center of aviation.

W. A. Harriman, whose father built railroads, has paid $500,000 for a Baltimore site to manufacture the largest all-metal passenger planes ever built in this country.

Baltimore is constructing a 400-acre municipal airport. Private flying companies are building airports of their own and huge factories, one to cost $15,000,000.

Oakland, Los Angeles, Boston, Cleveland and other "air cities" take notice.

Late news from Jerusalem tells of British soldiers parading with steel helmets, fixed bayonets, to reassure the population.

A story that Arabs have put poison in fruit offered for sale to Jews, intensifies the Jewish boycott on purchases from Arabs. One hotel could offer only rice at one meal.

A painful incident for relatives of 64 Jews killed in the Hebron uprising is caused by the fact that the big grave in which the 64 victims were buried is found to have been dug by men that were not Orthodox Jews, and made not deep enough. In consequence the rabbis have ordered the bodies dug up and reburied.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., returns from Thibet, China, Mongolia and points East, bringing for the Chicago Field Museum a giant panda.

You might not know what a panda is, but the natives know. They worship it, because it looks like a bear with two black eyes and has a queerly marked body. They must have needed something to worship.

STATE GRILL OF CHELSEA 'VICTIMS' ORDERED

Brown to Open Hearing Tomorrow; Bar and Medical Society Probe Collusion

Insurance Commissioner Merton L. Brown today issued 100 summonses in connection with some 30 cases of alleged fraudulent settlement of automobile accident claims.

The summonses were sent out on information supplied by the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce, and require attendance at an inquiry to be held by the commissioner at the State House at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

The commissioner said if any evidence of fraud is found it will be turned over to the proper authorities for action.

Commissioner Brown said he had a meeting with representatives of the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce, whose charges, when preferred at the hearing yesterday, created a sensation.

A list of 60 cases was examined, which the Chelsea men claimed warranted investigation, and about 30 of them were awarded out of the number submitted by Secretary Kaplan.

HEARING TO BE PUBLIC

Some of these involved the use of fictitious names of streets, others were cases where beneficiaries were never in hospitals, as claimed, and still more were where the insured persons contended they were never notified of settlements.

The insurance commissioner's action in sending out summonses was taken in accordance with law, which gives him that authority.

"We have sorted out those cases where the evidence warranted investigation," said Brown. "We have served and are serving summonses on all parties interested in these cases and they will be put under oath."

He added that the hearing at the State House tomorrow will be public in so far as the newspapers are concerned.

Commissioner Brown said he will be assisted by counsel for his department, Harold J. Taylor, and by one of his examiners, Thomas O'Connell.

The special commission created by the Legislature to investigate all phases of the motor vehicle liability law, of which Senator C. Wesley Hale is chairman, announced it will visit the offices of the Massachusetts Automobile Rating and Accident Prevention Bureau on Broad st., Friday at 10:30 a. m.

BAR IN INQUIRY

This visit will be made with a view to determining how the organization carries on its work, it was stated.

On Thursday and Friday of next week, it was announced, the commission will hold its first public hearing. At these hearings the question of the advisability of establishing a state fund for motor vehicle insurance will be gone into.

Frederick W. Mansfield, president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, is investigating charges that lawyers are in collusion with doctors and automobile owners to defraud in settling accident cases under the compulsory automobile law.

Mansfield, although declining to discuss the matter today, is known to have been in New York studying the procedure there which resulted in a cleanup of conditions similar to those alleged to be going on here.

HOOVER ASKS WIDE PROBE IN NAVY PLOT

Wants to Know if Shipbuilders Violated Contract by Their Activities

Washington, Sept. 11—The inquiry into activities of William B. Shearer, propagandist, and of certain warship builders, to prevent reduction of naval armaments, ordered to begin Thursday by the Senate, will not stop with this single inquiry, it is indicated at the White House.

Both Senators Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, who requested the inquiry, and Hale, chairman of the Investigating Committee, expressed the view that neither Shearer nor the shipbuilders could be convicted.

The President, however, has in mind other measures. He has asked the department of justice whether the shipbuilding concerns involved may not have violated their contracts with the navy department.

The government also intends to intervene in Shearer's pending suit against the shipbuilders on the "ground of public interest," and obtain any possible evidence of a plan to interfere with the international negotiations for the reduction of naval armaments.

The White House made public a letter from the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, admitting that Shearer had been employed by them as "an observer" at the Geneva conference of 1927.

President Hoover replied with a sharp statement saying there is al-

STOLE TO AID NEEDY, SAYS BANKER

Fugitive Caught; Says New Yorkers Could Afford Loss, but His Friends Couldn't

Newcastle, Wyo., Sept. 11 (AP)—C. D. Waggoner, president of the Bank of Telluride, Col., sought in connection with financial manipulations involving $500,000, was in jail here today.

The banker was arrested at a tourist camp eight miles north of here, where he had registered under his own name. He did not make no attempt to conceal his identity and was driving his own motor car.

Sheriff Carl Howell said Waggoner admitted the coup by which six New York banks, after receiving faked telegraphic orders from Denver, deposited $500,000 to his credit in the Chase National Bank of New York.

Waggoner said he engineered the

ATTY. MARSHALL DIES ABROAD

Zurich, Sept. 11 (INS)—Louis Marshall, noted New York lawyer, died today following an operation for pancreatic ulcer and a later blood transfusion.

The original operation was performed about a fortnight ago, after the attending specialists decided it was absolutely imperative. Later an additional operation was performed to aid nutrition.

Mr. Marshall grew so weak that the blood transfusion operation followed. The rally resulting from this operation was only temporary so a second transfusion took place on Monday.

Despite the studied care of three specialists, one American and two Swiss, the patient gradually grew worse, death coming today.

Louis Marshall attained an eminent place among lawyers of the United States as an authority in constitutional and corporation law. He was honored on several occasions for his leadership of Jewish causes in America.

SEEK FUGITIVE LUNATIC HERE

Boston police today joined in a hunt for a dangerous lunatic, escaped from the Rhode Island State Hospital for Insane, who is believed to be in this city.

He is William Corcoran, formerly of Baldwin st., Charlestown, who was committed to the hospital a week ago after threatening to shoot six men with a revolver in a Pawtucket office.

When the escape was discovered last night, a general alarm was sent out, with the warning that Corcoran is dangerous.

At supper in the institution Corcoran told other inmates that he was going to escape to "get" people who had been threatening and harassing him.

At the midnight checkup it was discovered he was missing and Providence and Rhode Island State police immediately began a search for him.

The alarm was sent out throughout the state, and Boston police were notified to be on the lookout.

Some time ago Corcoran and his family moved from Boston to Providence, the work being done by Burns Bros., of Broad st., Pawtucket.

A week ago he suddenly appeared in the office of Burns Bros. and producing a revolver, backed up to the wall six men, announcing he was going to shoot them all. He was particularly incensed against Arthur L. Duhamel, one of the men who had moved his furniture.

The Church of Our Lady of the Presentation was thronged today at the wedding of Miss Lillian C. Slattery, daughter of Schoolhouse Commission Chairman Francis E. Slattery and Mrs. Slattery, to John J. Glavin, Albany attorney.

Cardinal O'Connell was present at the nuptial mass. He was attended by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Michael J. Splains of the Church of St. Mary of the Ascension, Brookline, and the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Richard J. Haberlin.

The mass was celebrated by the Rev. Lawrence W. Slattery of Newton, an uncle of the bride.

TRIPLETS BORN TO DORIS HALE

Doris George Hale, Cambridge girl, former star dancer with her sister in "Allez-Oop," is the mother of triplets at the Bensonhurst Maternity Hospital, New York city.

Just a year ago the Cambridge girl, winner of many beauty prizes, married Paul Allen Hale, son of Curtis A. Hale, managing director of the Belvedere Hotel.

The marriage, which took place at the fashionable Fifth ave. Presbyterian Church, followed an engagement of six months.

When the nurses in attendance at the Bensonhurst Hospital announced the news of the arrival of the triplets—two girls and a boy—Paul Hale, husband of a year, was nearly overcome with surprise and delight. He is an executive of a New York publishing company and rated high in social and financial circles.

Life of 3 Million Jews Being "Snuffed Out"

Paris, Sept. 11 (AP)—After four weeks spent in Soviet Russia investigating the conditions of Jews living under the Bolshevik regime, Rabbi Simon Glazer, president of the Central Council of Rabbis of Greater New York, has returned to western Europe convinced that "slowly but surely the life is being snuffed out of more than 3,000,000 Russian Jews by the iron ule and diabolical ingenuity of Bolshevism."

Rabbi Glazer passed most of his time while in Russia in the villages. He got in touch with Russian rabbis and Jewish faithful.

From the results of his investigation he told the Associated Press correspondent that not more than 10 per cent of the number of Jews once in Russia were now attached to Judaism there.

Among those who have survived the troubles of the last ten years, "death and insanity are considered messengers of mercy," Rabbi Glazer said.

to him by Registrar of Motor Vehicles George A. Parker, in which there was suspicion of fraudulent dealings. The attorney-general said he found nothing to justify him going before a justice of the court or in calling a special session of the grand jury.

NO DATA FROM MONK.

Warner revealed that absolutely no data was presented to him by former Insurance Commissioner Wesley E. Monk, who first startled the public a year ago with wholesale charges of collusion. And nothing, he added, was received from officials of the State Board of Registration in Medicine.

He said:

"I see by the morning papers that Mr. Olsson yesterday testified that data in some 100 cases collected in Registrar Parker's office, in which Mr. Olsson is chief inspector, had been 'dissipated' in the files.

"It was also stated in the papers that there was a rumor to the effect that this data had been referred at some time to the attorney-general's office, the inference being that this data had been 'dissipated' in the files of the attorney-general.

"Nothing could be farther from the truth. Unfortunately the exact statement made by Mr. Olsson was not presented to me, but if Mr. Olsson is properly quoted and refers to the group of so-called cases of alleged fraud which were collected by Mr. Goodwin when he was registrar of motor vehicles, and which were delivered by present Registrar Parker to the attorney-general's department nearly a year ago, my answer is that all these cases now in the files of this department, except certain of them which were delivered back to Registrar Parker in person, on his request, were examined and no facts supporting proceedings for indictments were disclosed."

DOCTORS INVESTIGATE.

Dr. Robert B. Greenough, president of the Massachusetts Medical Society, today offered to co-operate in any way with the Massachusetts Bar Association in the investigation also being made.

Dr. Greenough said the medical society is anxious to co-operate with the bar association in eliminating abuses of accident reports and clearing up any questionable situation that might exist.

AUSTRALIA OUT OF ECONOMIC FEDERATION

Antipodes Delegate Says That Their Problems Differ From Europe's

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 11 (AP)—Charles W. Marr, first delegate of the Australian commonwealth to the assembly of the League of Nations, today told the assembly he had hoped to announce his government's adhesion to the compulsory arbitration of optional clause of the world court.

But in view of the change of government in Australia during the last 24 hours he regretted he was unable to make this declaration.

Referring to proposals for an economic confederation of Europe, he said he recalled 27 members of the league were not European countries. The economic problems of Australia are different from those of European nations, and the assembly must not be surprised if Australia should be unwilling to enter any convention for the reduction of tariffs.

He expressed approval, however, of the proposal of W. Graham, president of the Board of Trade, for the establishment of an international trade bureau to encourage commerce.

Foreign Minister Patrick McGilligan of the Irish Free State, regretted that so little apparent progress toward disarmament had been made during the ten years of the league's life.

He thought the difficulties of disarmament problems might easily be exaggerated, "especially if the technical mind prevailed."

Mr. McGilligan said the Free State would announce acceptance of the compulsory arbitration clause during the present session of the assembly and added that when he returned to Dublin he would seek parliamentary acceptance of the general act for peaceful settlement of international disputes. Ireland favors the progress of international economic co-operation, but insists on recognition of the differences between bargaining, retaliatory and protective tariffs.

Speed King

Augustus H. Orlebar, captain of British Schneider cup team, went faster than any human being ever traveled, when he went 368 miles an hour in the Supermarine Rolls Royce S-6. (I. N. R. photo.)

Calshot, Eng., Sept. 11—Squadron Leader A. H. Orlebar, England's King of Aviators, will attempt tomorrow to attain a speed of 370 miles an hour.

Although he averaged 355-8 miles an hour over a three-kilometer course here on Tuesday, breaking all existing speed records, he expressed the belief that poor visibility hindered him from reaching the maximum speed of his supermarine Rolls-Royce S-6 model seaplane. At one point he made 368.8 miles an hour.

Orlebar's flight not only broke the record set by H. L. R. Atcherley in winning the Schneider Cup races last week—a mark of 332 miles an hour—but it beat the record of C. H. Stainforth, who flew over the straight line course prior to Orlebar's flight. Stainforth averaged 336.3 miles an hour.

U. S. FAR FROM NAVAL PARITY WITH BRITAIN

Former Ambassador Assails Efforts to Keep Nation in Various States of Coma

New York, Sept. 11—Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy, urges an investigation of the Shearer case broad enough to include lobbies of:

Church organizations.
Pacifist machines.
Foreign propaganda "intended to keep the United States in various states of coma."

Child made this suggestion in a letter to Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

His letter was hailed by William H. Shearer, naval expert now under government fire, as "wonderful," and in full support of Shearer's policies. Shearer said:

CONDEMNS LOBBIES

Child, writing to Senator Borah from his home in Newport, said:

"The investigation of the Shearer case ought to be undertaken by the foreign relations committee, of which you are chairman. It should be sweeping. It should include not only the shipbuilding companies and their activities, which have shocked the President, but should extend also to lobbies carried on by employes of church organizations and of fanatic pacifists' machines which do not make plain the sources of their funds, or prove their freedom from relationship with radical alien internationals, or with foreign-inspired propaganda intended to keep the United States in various states of coma in its various relations and defense.

PROPAGANDA METHODS

"We were drawn neatly, by propaganda publicity methods, in the Washington disarmament conference into a position where material parity was sacrificed for the gesture of piety.

"The American people today are utterly hoodwinked by the published discussions about reductions and naval parity with Great Britain.

"Today there is not even an approach to naval parity. Our naval defense, including all its factors, is hopelessly second or third class. In cases of emergency it takes not a season, but years, to build this sea power.

deal to protect depositors in his bank in Telluride.

He made it clear, however, that he alone was responsible for the manipulations which resulted in a complaint charging grand larceny being filed against him in New York.

GLAD HE'S CAPTURED

Waggoner declared he had "thought out the whole scheme carefully ahead of time," and insisted that neither his wife nor C. W. Downtain, cashier of the bank of Telluride, knew anything about the transaction.

He said he had been travelling in the Dakotas, Nebraska and Wyoming, and that he was "nearly glad" he had been arrested. He said he expected to go to jail "for the rest of my life" for his speculations and declared he "might not even retain an attorney" if he was removed to Denver or New York to face charges of grand larceny.

"The bottom dropped out of things in Telluride and a desperate move was necessary," Waggoner said.

"I would rather see the New York banks lose than the people of Telluride," he said, "as I had worked all their lives for the savings that were deposited in my banks."

WOULD SAVE DEPOSITORS

Waggoner declared the decline of Telluride, once a prosperous mining town, had hit his banks and that with failure staring him in the face he conceived the idea of protecting his depositors at the expense of the New York banks.

"I knew exactly what I was doing," said Waggoner. "There is no one to blame but myself. I was the one who sent the fake telegrams out of Denver to the six New York correspondent banks, and neither my wife, my family, nor any of the officials of the bank had any connection with the transaction.

Waggoner said he was thinking only of the creditors of his bank when he planned the transaction, and he knew he had nothing to gain and everything to lose.

TIRED OF FLIGHT

"After sending the telegrams I went to New York and presented the drafts which transferred the money from the Chase National Bank to the credit of the Bank of Telluride," Waggoner said.

"I had been doing business with the New York banks for many years. I was known there and believed they would accept the drafts."

"This idea of evading something all the time was beginning to get on my nerves," he said.

Several days after his transactions were discovered, authorities at Denver and Colorado bank officials advanced the theory that Waggoner manipulated to pay off depositors in his bank. The bank was closed last week following announcement that Waggoner was missing.

13 Die in Bus Crash

20 SEIZED IN BOMB PLOT

Berlin, Sept. 11 (AP)—A dangerous conspiracy of terror against the German republic organized by nationalist fanatics who are members of the notorious "Consul" organization founded by the ex-naval Capt. Ehrhardt, it is believed, has been unearthed by the police.

Twenty men implicated in recent bomb outrages in various parts of Germany, including the attempt against the Reichstag buildings, have been arrested.

The leader of the alleged conspiracy is a former Stuttgart police captain named Nickels whom the police followed from the Lunenburg district to Hamburg after the recent bombing in the Lunenburg provincial government offices.

A house Nickels visited was searched and a bomb supposed to be intended for another outrage was found. The tenant of the house was arrested and the police followed Nickels to Krambe, near Hamburg, where he was taken into custody.

The search of the house where Nickels stayed revealed documents compromising others. The arrests include Lieut. Waeschke and Bruno von Salomon, publisher and editor of a small Agrarian newspaper.

FIGHT ROXBURY HIGHWAY PLEA

Dismissal of a petition for the acceptance of Franklin Garden Trust as a public highway was urged today by Walter R. Meins, representing two score Roxbury property owners before the board of street commissioners at City Hall.

The Franklin Gardens Trust is a $225,000 apartment house at the corner of Humbolt ave. and Crawford st., Roxbury, surrounding an area 140 feet deep. Petitioners ask that the areaway be made a public thoroughfare.

It is claimed the apartment was erected in violation of the zoning law. Since the supreme court ordered the Building Commissioner to proceed against the property on those grounds, Meins declares the building as it now stands is illegal.

He inferred that the naming of areaway as a public thoroughfare would make the building legal.

ready so much evidence of "interference" in efforts to reduce naval armaments that a full inquiry is justified.

The letter of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, signed by E. G. Grace, president, created a sensation. He said that in the spring of 1927, without his knowledge, his concern had joined with other shipbuilding corporations to pay Shearer $25,000 for his services as an observer at Geneva.

When it was learned that Shearer had engaged in propaganda activities Grace said that he ordered his dismissal.

The previous year, Grace stated, his firm had employed Shearer to help promote development of an American merchant marine.

The Senate naval affairs committee voted for the investigation with only one dissenting vote. This was from Senator Waterman, Republican, Colorado, who said that the investigation should embrace all propaganda.

Shearer Is "Blacklisted" by England for "Old Activity"

London, Sept. 11 (INS)—Well informed circles admitted this afternoon that the name of William B. Shearer, American "big navy propagandist," is on the list of undesirable aliens in the British archives.

It was placed there long before the 1927 naval limitation conference whose collapse is said to have been largely due to Shearer's activities.

Prescription of Shearer by the British Immigration authorities was "for reasons not connected with naval affairs," it was declared.

The circumstances involving Shearer were said to have taken place many years ago.

Boy in Hospital Twice in a Week

For the second time within a week, five-year-old Eugene Auld of 38 Lawrence st., Charlestown, is a hospital patient. While crossing Rutherford ave., he ran into the path of an automobile, operated by Matthew V. Donovan of Lagrange st., West Roxbury, who took him to the Haymarket Sq. Relief Hospital, where Dr. Robbins found him suffering from contusions and abrasions of the head and lower left leg.

A week ago, the lad tripped and fell striking his head on the curb ing. At the relief hospital he was treated for a lacerated wound on the head.

'Modern Adam' Plans Wilds Entry Friday

New York, Sept. 11—Burt M. McConnell, explorer-editor, has sent word to friends in New York that he hopes to be ready to begin his "modern Adam" adventure Friday. He is in Fredericton, New Brunswick, conferring with Provincial officials on his plan for three months of isolation in the forests near there.

To carry out successfully his experiment of going into the wilds without food, clothing, weapons or implements of any kind, McConnell is trying to avoid the possibility of encountering any other human being during his absence.

It was reported that the New Brunswick Department of Lands and Forests refused to guarantee him exclusive territory in which to carry out his experiment.

McConnell said that he found the officials ready to co-operate as far as possible. While they could not legally prohibit other hunters from entering the area he has selected, they will probably assist him by using their influence to protect him from invasion of his hermitage.

McConnell said he expected to be so busy hunting his own food and assembling materials for clothing and shelter that he wanted to avoid the possibility of being forced to hide from hunters.

McConnell gave this explanation of the early reluctance of the New Brunswick officials to take an active interest in his adventure.

"While the Minister of Lands and Mines of New Brunswick is not hostile to my idea, he does not want to take the responsibility of approving what he considered a hazardous experiment. He knows very well that a famous explorer—Hubbard—starved to death under similiar conditions in Labrador not 100 miles north of where I will enter the wilderness.

"As a matter of fact, I would prefer to go to Quebec. There are no wolves in New Brunswick and I consider it very essential that I get some wolf skins almost immediately. It is the warmest sort of skin and I shall need warmth and plenty of it.

"There are moose, deer, black bear, lynx, rabbits and geese in New Brunswick. Under the terms of my agreement I will eat no vegetables, berries or such food. My diet will be confined strictly to meat. I have interested the officials of the Institute of Pathology of the Russell Sage Foundation and they look with favor on my plan to live on meat only. They will study the effects of this diet."

Of all the hours of the day, there is one time when we like best to have company. That is in the early evening hours—when neighbors drop in to spend a while with us.

The real "telephone hour" comes at the same time. A visit to a telephone neighbor a hundred miles away adds much to those pleasant evenings at home.

To allow more and more use of our out-of-town service to those who have to consider costs, we have provided a low evening rate on calls made by number between seven and eight-thirty o'clock. At distances above forty miles, the rates are about one quarter less than normal day rates. A call or two will convince you of the speed and low cost of this service.

Traffic records show that a greater percentage of calls can be completed promptly in the period from seven to eight-thirty than at any other time in the evening.

Plan your social calls during this period. We are sure you will be pleased with the speed and economy of this evening service.

Tidswell also showed the "boys" he was still the premier drummer when he took his favorite drum, and surely made her rattle with his long rolls and marches. He holds the drum championship of the G. A. R.

Portland, Me., Sept. 11—Marching to the music of 17 bands and drum corps, the thinned ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic passed in review today before dignitaries of city, state and nation.

Less than one thousand of the eighty host which rallied to save the Union three-score years ago were able to tramp this morning over the mile-long parade route.

The skeleton squads, however, lacked nothing of the impressiveness of days gone by. The gaps in the ragged line were filled with the unseen presences of comrades long since gone to their last rest.

The column was headed by Commander-in-Chief John Reese of Montana, escorted by his staff. The police guard was in charge of Capt. William McDonough, the only living officer of the Portland department who marched in the last G. A. R. encampment here, in 1885.

There were 40,000 of the Boys in Blue at that reunion. In today's assembly, afoot and in motor cars, was a total of less than 3000.

HEADS HELD HIGH.

White heads were held high, however, as the marchers trudged past the City Hall reviewing stand where Governor William Tudor Gardiner stood with hat doffed in salute to the ragged battleflags of Shiloh and Antietam and Gettysburg.

Canes that, of habit, guided faltering feet were shouldered by many of the veterans in lieu of the musket, long since rusted and gone.

Clear sunshine, dry walking and crisp breezes made the physical ordeal of the short hikes less arduous for the aged soldiers. First aid units in attendance were not called upon to assist a single straggler.

NOT ONE FALLS OUT

One of the largest crowds in Portland's recent history watched the parade. School children were freed from their classes for the day and many workers were released by business firms during the period of the spectacle.

City Manager James E. Barlow represented the municipality on the reviewing stand.

Commander-in-chief Ruse endorsed the proposed reunion of soldiers who fought for the north and the south in the Civil War at the opening meeting today.

The question is expected to come before the encampment tomorrow. Many veterans have expressed opposition to the movement. Commander Thomas G. Smith of Nebraska insisting that his men would ont 'march behind a Rebel flag.

TO ELECT OFFICERS

Second only in interest to the parade as a feature of the day's program was the election of officers, scheduled for this afternoon. New England attention was closely focused on the contest by the announcement of the candidacy of a New England veteran for the post of national commander in chief.

Newly named for the honor—and backed by an enthusiastic delegation—was Edward J. Foster of Worcester, past commander of the department of Massachusetts, G. A. R.

Other candidates included Samuel E. Town of Philadelphia, Silas H. Towler of Minneapolis, James E. Jewell of Colorado, and B. H. Cony of Kansas.

CHILDREN'S DAY OPENS FAIR

Topsfield, Sept. 11—Thousands of children from all parts of Essex County today attended the annual children's day opening of Topsfield fair and enjoyed a special program, including pony exhibitions and midway attractions.

Officials in charge of the fair predicted that this year's attendance would surpass that of any since its organization 115 years ago.

The center of interest lies in the horse show, which will be staged daily in the new exhibition ring within the track inclosure. In addition there will be daily running races and steeplechases.

Ex-Governor Alvin T. Fuller has entered several horses, including his famous five-gaited thoroughbred Zane Grey.

A separate department has been established for the 50 Morgan thoroughbreds which have been shipped from all parts of the country for entry.

Among the novel exhibitions scheduled is the handing of bees, which will be discussed daily by Prof. C. L. Farrar of Massachusetts Agricultural College. His lectures will close Saturday with a demonstration by Ambrose Eastwood and Stephen Dyer, both of Lawrence, who will be inclosed in a wire cage with a swarm of bees released from their hives.

St. Pierre, Miq., Sept. 11 (AP)—Heavy seas today had wrecked the salt-laden French three-masted schooner, Grebe, out of Saint-Malo, which was stranded on Point Blanch, on the south coast, during the night.

One coach, occupied by 46 children en route to schools in New Orleans, was riddled by bullets. The children complied with the conductor's order to lie flat on the floor.

KIDNAPED BOY HOME AGAIN

New York, Sept. 11—His ruddy cheeks glowing and blue eyes sparkling with excitement, Jan Capp, Jr., is at home today after one of the biggest adventures a four-year-old boy ever experienced.

The wind played havoc with the neat part in Jan's hair as he stood clinging to the deck rail of the liner Estonia as she came up the harbor, but he peered ahead, restless and eager for a glimpse of his parents waiting on the pier in Brooklyn—the first sight of the he had had since he was stolen from their home in New Haven, Conn., last April.

It was Joseph Urban, a former boarder in the Capp home, who took Jan on his big adventure. Frantic parents asked the police to search. For months the hunt was unavailing.

Finally, in the far off Danzig, Urban was found. With him was Jan. European police had trailed Urban through several countries. He was placed under arrest, but what to do with Jan?

The parents were unable to pay the boy's expenses home, but Governor Trumbull solved the trouble by raising a fund, and he was sent home on the Estonia.

Brown to Demand Cut in Cost of Air Mail

Washington, Sept. 11 (AP)—Postmaster General Brown today summoned air mail contractors to a conference beginning Sept. 30, at which he will endeavor to reduce rates paid by the government for air mail transportation.

Mr. Brown said he was prepared to bring about an adjustment which was expected "to greatly reduce the present excessive cost for this service to the public."

The postmaster-general under authority given by the air mail act of May 17, 1928, will begin negotiations to extend air mail contracts for a period of ten years from the date they began operation.

On May 27, he told a conference of air mail contractors that while the government was not disposed to drive a hard bargain, the disparity between the amount earned and expended by the government for air mail and also the difference in pay to contractors called for a readjustment.

Arlington Man Freed From Jail

Providence, Sept. 11—James R. Coughlin, of Arlington, Mass., who was jailed here on a charge of violating a court order, was released today when his 3-year-old son, James, Jr., was returned to his wife's home in East Providence.

The mother, who was granted a divorce and custody of her five children several months ago, charged Coughlin took the child to his Arlington home and refused to return it.

Judge Capotosto in Superior Court ordered Coughlin to pay his former wife arrears in alimony and to return furniture which she charged he removed from her home.

Two coaches and a baggage car were used to transport 101 Doukhobor men and women sentenced to jail for taking part in a nude procession.

PUT DRUG ISSUE TO LEAGUE

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.

Geneva, Sept. 11 (INS)—America has stepped into the forground at Geneva with a vigorous demand that the League of Nations "set to work in real earnest" to solve a problem becoming more menacing daily—the growing illicit traffic in narcotics.

The demand was voiced by Alfredo De Castro, Uruguayan minister to Switzerland. The spokesman for the new world, which suffers because the old world declines to limit its drug production to legitimate requirements, called for "energetic and frank measures to point out the real causes of the smuggling of these drugs and the reason why remedies so far taken have failed."

The outstanding recommendations by De Castro were:

Immediate study of the proposal, forwarded by the United States, for the adoption of the contingent method, in order to control international narcotic traffic. It was this proposal which the "opium bloc" of the league's advisory commission buried earlier in the year, despite objections by Italy, China and other nations.

Consideration by the league's fifth commissions, which meets today of urgent measures which must be taken to get action which will limit the manufacture of noxious drugs.

With the Uruguayan's pointed remarks on the eve of the assembling of the league's fifth commission today to consider the narcotic question, the situation has undergone a complete change.

Europe has been much too wrapped up in its own affairs to consider anything else. Indeed, anybody having any doubts whether the league is primarily a European enterprise need only have been at Geneva in the last 10 days to be set right.

U. S. Warrants for 2 Chicago Pool Men

Chicago, Sept. 11 (INS)—Federal investigators today sought the arrest of two alleged operators of the largest so-called baseball pools in Chicago, following the issuing of warrants by a U. S. commissioner.

Moscow, Sept. 11 (INS)—Prof. Schmidt, aboard the Soviet ice breaker Sedov, off Franz Josef Land, wirelessed today that search has been carried out for the missing Alessandri group of the ill-fated Nobile Arctic expedition and the lost Amundsen group of would-be rescuers, but without result. Both groups have been missing for more than a year.

UNION LEADERS DEFY THREATS

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 11 (AP)—Investigation of the kidnaping and flogging of Communist union organizers was being conducted today by State authorities under direction of Governor O. Max Gardner, and labor leaders planned to carry through their program in North Carolina's textile centers despite purported threats against their lives.

Bill Dunne, secretary of the Communist party in the United States, asserted that international labor defense officials would conduct the previously announced mass meeting in South Gastonia Saturday. Ben Wells, Communist leader from England and organizer for the National Textile Workers Union, who was kidnaped with two other organizers and flogged Monday night by a mob of several hundred self styled "Anti-Communists," said members of the mob, "told me if they found myself or any other union organizer in the country (Gaston), their bodies will be found riddled with bullets."

Wells, still suffering from the flogging, and the two other organizers said they would return to Gastonia despite the threat.

Governor Gardner and Attorney-General Dennis Brummitt conferred by telephone with Solicitor John G. Carpenter of the Superior Court district in which Gastonia, Bessemer City and Charlotte, scenes of the mob activities, are located. The governor instructed the solicitor to leave no stone unturned to get at the bottom of the trouble and promised to do anything he could to assist.

The Attorney-General held that a Grand Jury investigation could not be called without a special term of court in any one of the counties. The law in Mecklenburg County provides a six months Grand Jury, but the Attorney-General ruled it does not provide that the presiding judge can call the jury which only can be called at a special term of court and on 20 days notice.

Forfeit British Rum Ship to U. S. Court

New York, Sept. 11 (INS)—A decree of forfeiture was entered today in the federal district court in Brooklyn, forfeiting to the United States the British steamer, Harbour Trader, and a cargo of intoxicating liquor.

ORIGINAL TWO NO TRUMP
Salient Points of Bidding

Auction: Obviously there is no point to be discussed in the auction bidding.

Contract: South's holding admirably illustrates the conventional requirement for an original bid of two No Trumps in any position around the table. These requirements are (a) four or more quick tricks, (b) all four suits stopped, (c) at least three of the suits doubly stopped. While two No Trump bids are not justified if lacking (a) or (b), they are at times justified when lacking (c), as for example, with the following hand:

Spades, J, 10, 9, x; hearts, A, K, x, diamonds, A, 9, 7; clubs, A, K, J

A bid of two No Trumps should be made with this holding and similar holdings even though but two of the suits are doubly stopped.

With North's hand a bid of one No Trump by South would have to be passed and the bidding would have died. But, starting with two No Trumps, South demands a response by North unless holding an absolutely trickless hand. Thus North, with his holding, must raise the bid of two to three.

The Play

West opens the 5 of Spades. Declarer must inevitably lose a spade trick and takes the loss at once, refusing to win the first lead although holding the ace and king. Although this play seldom results in any material advantage, no harm can possibly result from it unless there is a chance of the adversaries' shifting to a dangerous suit, which is not the case in this instance. With certain game in sight, there would be no occasion to hold off from the first trick, but with this hand Declarer can count but seven sure tricks, two short of game. Should declarer have taken the first trick in dummy, he would, of course, have held off the second round in order to retain control of the suit, if possible, until East had no more of it.

At trick 3, declarer leads the jack of clubs, rather than start the diamond suit, in order to drive out the ace of clubs should it be in West's hand. West winning, leads another spade which South wins. South continues with the king of clubs, West's ten falling. South then leads the queen of clubs and a long club is established in North's (dummy's) hand.

Declarer (South) now leads a low diamond, and as one diamond trick is bound to be lost, the first trick is surrendered to East, in order to avoid the possible winning of the third round by West, known to be long in spades.

East leads a heart and South goes up with the ace to keep West from the lead. South now takes his three diamond tricks, two spade tricks and dummy's long club, losing one spade trick at the end, but making game on the hand.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope.

". . . go out and watch New York's famous 'Old Seventh' Regiment take the concealed name cigarette test. We will publish your eye-witness story word for word". . . So here it is.

By Floyd Gibbons

CAMP SMITH, Peekskill, N.Y., Aug. 17th.—I have shared the soldier's cigarette in pretty nearly every corner of the world, and I know how set in his ways an army man can get when it comes to knowing what smoke he likes. So, frankly, the idea that a two year old cigarette—even if it did have the name OLD GOLD—could win this test over three old time brands seemed unbelievable.

But the thing worked out. At Camp Smith, where I witnessed the test, OLD GOLD put the bee on 506 Yanks of the Old Seventh New York Regiment.

The Old Seventh went OLD GOLD with 195 bull's-eyes, as against 144 for the next brand, with the two other old timers rating scores of 81 and 86. That's the target tally for the 506 doughboys who stood on the smoking line and took drags on each of the four masked cigarettes. What's more, this concealed name test is as square as a regimental parade ground.

PALESTINE IS QUIET AGAIN

Jerusalem, Sept. 11 (INS)—Investigation by the British authorities into the recent Arab-Jewish rioting throughout Palestine continued today, pending the arrival of a special court of inquiry from England.

The situation is now almost completely normal, with the exception of the mutual boycott both by Jews and Arabs, which has been strengened by reports that Moslems have sold poisoned food to Hebrew purchasers.

The boycott has had the effect of temporarily wrecking trade and scores of shops remain closed. The attention of the British authorities is constantly being called to alleged instances of sabotage on food offered for sale, and strenuous efforts are being made to bring the trade situation back to normal.

There is still great bitterness between Jews and Arabs, evident on all sides, and the commission of inquiry is being anxiously awaited by both factions. Jewish leaders are confident that the commission will exonerate their race from any charges of complicity in the recent outbreaks, while Moslem leaders are equally certain that blame for the initial fireup will be laid to the Jews.

'Americans Are "Silly Geese," Says Briton

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—Charles P. Rideal, 72-year-old Englishman on trial in federal court for using the mails to defraud in stock deals, has a poor opinion of Americans. A letter from him to London associates introduced by the prosecution says of Americans:

"They are not to be relied upon either by word or contract. The only thing they are good for is to make money out of them. When it comes to that they are about as silly a set of geese as were ever plucked by human hand."

12 Hurt in Bus Crash

Flat Rock, Mich., Sept. 11 (AP)—Twelve persons were injured, none seriously, when a Cleveland to Detroit bus carrying 10 passengers left Telegraph rd. and plunged over an eight-foot embankment.

Seeks Figures on Ice Cream

Editor Boston American:

Philadelphia stands at the head of the list for eating ice cream, where eight gallons is consumed yearly by every man, woman and child.

New York is second, I understand. In this contest. What I would like to know more than anything else, to settle a friendly argument, is how much ice cream is eaten yearly per person in Boston?

I have asked this question repeatedly of many persons who shook their heads and said: "I don't know." Who knows?

Objects to Habit of Conductors

Editor Boston American:

I am glad that the Elevated is going to issue tokens in the four-for-a-quarter fare. When you bought tickets from a conductor on the Elevated, if you noticed sharply, you would see that he would stick his thumb or forefinger, and sometimes both, in his mouth, pull the tickets out of his pocket and then hand you two.

When you gave him a check upon leaving the car he would also stick his thumb and forefinger in his mouth and pick up the ticket to return it to you for your check. This is something, of course, the Board of Health has not noticed.

Would Lead Jews Against Arabs

Editor Boston American:

I have been reading lately of the numerous atrocities committed by the Arabs in Palestine. My dear sir, you jolly well know these Jewish chaps certainly gave us quite a help, I may say, during the late war. In fact, I have reason to remember a Jewish chap who probably saved my life. He "went West" later.

I haven't had any real thrill since the war. Life does get so darn lonesome. I was endeavoring to locate the inventor of the rocket plane to take a rap at that as experimental pilot. I have been unable to locate him. Perhaps you can assist me with information.

About this Palestine affair, if any Jewish organization can procure a hundred volunteers or so for a machine gun unit, I gladly offer my services to lead them against the Arabs. You know nothing is more irritating to an Arab's nerves than to face concentrated machine gun fire.

Says Boston Should Own Gas Company

Editor Boston American:

In reply to the letter in your issue by H. T. F., who urges city to operate Boston gas plant, that is a possibility when the inhabitants wake up and demand their rights. What ails Boston? Nearly 300 years old, that city in the past outlawed piracy and bucket shops. Will the Boston papers take the trouble to reprint and remind the people how control in Boston gas lighting companies was acquired by the Bay State Gas Co. of Delaware, whose first president was Eddicks? How deadly enemies plotted his ruin.

Any one with a long memory can remember how Roger Wolcott, then governor, signed a franchise to an alien gas company, which in turn became part of the Massachusetts Gas Co., alias Boston Consolidated Gas Co.

The latter one wants more money from new rates. It did not settle with the stockholders of the Bay State Gas Co. One fearless stock broker, Thomas W. Lawson, author of "Frenzied Finance" deprived the Bay State Gas of Delaware of ownership. As piracy is no longer honored, the city of Boston does well to step in and claim all as by right of original ownership. Why not?

Congratulates American on Timely Cartoon

Editor Boston American:

Hearty congratulations on the cartoon in your issue of September 3, to your paper, and to Nelson Harding.

The American is an appropriate name for a paper that publishes such a strong appeal to the people of the United States of America.

I feel that every representative of the people, nation or state, should receive a copy of the "Hawk and Hen" cartoon, and should be glad to contribute to that end.

MAP ROUTE FOR FORD TROPHY AIR TOUR

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

The 1929 National Air Tour for the Edsel B. Ford trophy will not schedule a stop in Boston because of the unfinished condition of the airport. From the Ford field at Dearborn, the 25 ships will swing into Canada, then down to Portland for lunch, Oct. 7, and from there to Fisk park, Springfield, Mass., for the night.

This Reliability Tour is not a race in any sense of the word. As many ships as care to will enter, taking a full load of passengers and express, and flying over a designated route. The plane that carries the most weight for its size and horsepower, plus the best time at cruising speeds, will win the Ford trophy.

The course extends from Windsor, Ont., down the Atlantic seaboard to Jacksonville, thence across the Middle Western states as far as Wichita, Kansas, for a total distance of approximately 5000 miles. Sixteen days are allotted the contestants for the journey, and the show brings out the best in plane, motor and pilot.

According to an announcement received from Bruno and Blythe, the crash of the T. A. T. air liner City of San Francisco was the first accident of any consequence in 225,000 miles of flying. Since the inauguration of the line, 1500 passengers have been carried, with more than 35 per cent of the total making the complete trip from coast to coast.

Up to September 3, no passengers had been killed or injured in any way, no delay in service or interruption of schedules was caused, and no deviation from the established routes made necessary.

The zippiest salesman of them all, Leo "Skip" Tracy, of the Curtiss sales force, is continuing his record of airplanes sold, and states that he will have something big to announce in a few days. Tracy, an old time barnstorming pilot, has sold four ships in three weeks.

With his J-6 Wright motored Travel Air tied up for a few minor repairs, LeRoy "Bon Bon" D'Arce, of the New England Airports Corp., hired Old Colony Airways Corp's Ryan Brougham to go down to the Cape. When he came back, he popped into the Boston Airport, and in landing a brake cable let go. He called Old Colony down at Mueller Field, Revere, and a few minutes later Johnnie Polando, chief of maintenance, came down in an Eagle-Rock armed with a bucket of tools. A few minutes later, the Ryan was again ready for the air, and "Bon Bon" continued his hop.

The altitude record of P. H. Spencer of 18,671 feet in an OX-5 motored Robin, has been beaten by Milton Hamon, manager of the Bridgeport airport, Bridgeport, Ct. Hammon received word from the National Aeronautic Association that he had climbed or pushed the OX-5 motored Robin to 19,593 feet.

HASTEN, YOUNG AMERICA; BUT 2 DAYS LEFT

Come on, boys and girls, you have only two days left to get in your editorials for that new feature—Young America's Own Weekly Editorial Page—which will become a part of the Boston Evening American this week.

This unusual editorial feature will give every high school boy and girl of Greater Boston an opportunity to realize the ambition of writing for a metropolitan newspaper and to have their editorials read by hundreds of thousands of persons. Not only do you get a chance to write for a great metropolitan newspaper, but you also have an opportunity to get paid handsomely for your effort.

The Young America's Own Weekly Editorial Page will be edited exclusively by high school boys and girls in Metropolitan Boston. The first page will appear in next Saturday's Boston Evening American. Watch for it.

All you have to do is to write editorials on topics suggested each week or on any other topic of current interest. These editorials should be between 150 and 200 words in length and must be written or typed on one side of the paper only.

There will be 12 awards each week for the best editorials. The first award will be $15; the second $10, and the next 10 awards each week will be a pair of orchestra seats to Boston theaters.

The suggested subjects for the first week are:

(1) The importance of dress for high school boys and girls.

(2) The tour of the Graf Zeppelin.

(3) Why should boys and girls read newspaper editorials?

(4) The relationship of teacher and pupil. (Should the teacher "hobnob" or hold himself aloof?)

Charles E. McCool, for the past 10 years a teacher of high school English, will be the sole judge in making the awards. The editorials will be judged on the basis of understanding of the subject, clarity and force of expression and adherence to rules of grammar and construction.

Boys and girls who wish to enter their editorials in the first week's competition must send them in before midnight, Thursday, Sept. 12. Mail your letter to Director of Young America's Editorial Page, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston, Mass.

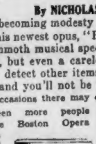
"HERE AND THERE" HAS EVERYTHING, AND HOW!

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THERE is becoming modesty in Mr. R. H. Burnside's definition of his newest opus, "Here and There." He describes it as a "mammoth musical spectacle." Well, it is all of that, undoubtedly, but even a careless eye and an indifferent ear would easily detect other items of interest. Call it a show—a carnival—and you'll not be far wrong.

ON other occasions there may have been more people crowding the Boston Opera House stage, tolling in the arts that cheer, but we cannot recall any entertainment of wider variety or gayer color. As the piece gradually unfolds you discover several slices of smart vaudeville and a large helping of circus. These are mere interpolations, perhaps, but they figure happily in the evening's rush of song, dance and ensemble. As a musical show "Here and There" may lay rightful claim to retention, chiefly because a full-voiced chorus displays its sonorous wares without one quavering note.



Nicholas Young

* * *

THAT mellifluous stalwart of the theater, De Wolf Hopper, directs the proceedings from the center of the stage. He has a great deal to say and very little to do, since, by chance, he deserves credit for a few moments of parlor magic. As master of revels, if we may call it that, Mr. Hopper keeps you fully informed on all questions of who's who and what difference does it make? Broadly outlined, "Here and There" is a collection of specialties and colorful spectacles, carefully set in a frame made up of the best tunes from the Civil War to prohibition.

* * *

THE printed program gives credit for the music to John Philip Sousa, Raymond Hubbell and Irving Berlin. Yet there were not all, nor even half the company composers on the firing line. While we missed the names of Stephen Foster and Sir Arthur Sullivan in Mr. Burnside's official roster, their contribution gave the program its spine, which are reminiscent of the days when song writing was a labor of love and not a problem in economics. "The Minstrel Party," as a fair example, is a riot of melody, now and old, and we lean heavily upon the thought that Stephen Foster had not lived in vain. Another number, playfully described as fifteen minutes with Gilbert and Sullivan, takes you on a lovely journey through "Pinafore," "The Mikado," "Pirates of Penzance" and "Iolanthe." These items alone amply atone for any sins of omission you may discover elsewhere in the program.

* * *

BUT the show does not entirely depend upon its ensembles and its songs. Joe Jackson, tramp comedian of vaudeville fame, works wonders with a broken bicycle, an outfit of rags for raiment and a rare gift of pantomime. He starts you with a chuckle and finally leaves you swaying with sore sides in your chair. The boy is a genuine comic. Alfred Loyal and his dog circus, and Maude Henry's dancing elephants give variety to the program, competing with Kathleen Pope and William Frick, fancy skaters, and the diminutive Togo, who flirts with danger by cousting on a slipper rope from a balcony box to the stage.

* * *

CALL it hodge-podge if you must, but "Here and There" is rather good fare for those who enjoy the circus, the vaudeville stage and the good old tunes that grandfather knew so well and whistled so badly.

RUDY VALLEE 'REGULAR GUY'

AS a youngster Hubert Prior Vallee, for that was his name at christening, did all the things that a small town boy usually does. He played hookey from grammar school, he went swimming and fishing in summer and skating and sliding in winter. Still in his teens, too, he worked behind the soda fountain in his father's drug store and became an expert mixer of concoction of all the latest concoctions. As a freshman in high school Vallee became an adept drummer, playing with the school orchestra, with the town band and with various dance teams.

Rudy Vallee

It was during his first year in high school, also, that Vallee carried away by the enthusiasm attending America's entry into the World War, ran away from home and enlisted as a regular seaman in the navy, serving his apprenticeship at the Newport training station and being assigned to duty aboard the battleship Texas before the discovery of his true age brought him an honorable discharge and sent him home to Maine.

His collegiate education started at the University of Maine. His transfer to Yale University followed. Vallee for a season played with the famous Hotel Savoy band in London. Returning he finished his course at Yale, graduating there in 1927 and, in his final year, being the leader of the famous Yale football band.

Ethel Barrymore Hopes To Star in "Electra"

When Ethel Barrymore, at the invitation of the University of California, inspected the Greek Theater in Berkeley and was met there by the Greek Theater committee, she told Dr. William Popper, the chairman, that to act in a Greek tragedy was one of the dreams of her life which shortly will be realized.

The committee extended an invitation to Miss Barrymore to make her first production of a Greek drama in the Greek Theater under the auspices of the University of California. It is Sophocles' "Electra" which most interests Miss Barrymore.

"GREAT DAY" TO OPEN AT COLONIAL

FROM the quiet and dignified occupation of a bank clerk to that of a composer of such tinkling tunes as "Tea for Two," "I Want to Be Happy," "Hallelujah," and later as a producer of such hits as "Hit the Deck," is the colorful career of Vincent Youmans, whose new production "Great Day" will make its debut at the Colonial next Tuesday night. Youmans is a romantic figure. At the age of 30 he is the youngest and one of the more successful theatrical producers and composers in America.

Vincent Youmans

Like most of the good careers cherished by parents for their children, that of a bank clerk didn't quite seem to fit him. When the World War broke out, he enlisted as a sailor. Strange as are many of the adventures of young Vincent Youmans' position as a gob had much to do with his finding his metier.

He liked to listen to the Marine Band and he won the close friendship of its leader. Having previously studied music he knew the meaning of those little black notes that dangle on a music sheet.

He wrote a song. The bandmaster said it might be good enough to publish. That composition later became the hit of "Hit the Deck." It was the now popular "Hallelujah," spiritual of that production, all of the music which came from the pen of young Youmans.

Eva Le Gallienne To Give Radio Series

That Eva Le Gallienne has no fear of the radio as a competitor of her Civic Repertory Theater was proved by the announcement that she has arranged to give a series of presentations of short plays on the air at times to be announced. Selections from long plays chosen from her extensive repertory over Station WABC and affiliated stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

"The Sacred Flame"

Pauline Frederick will star in a Vitaphone version of W. Somerset Maugham's stage success, "The Sacred Flame." Supporting her will be Conrad Nagel, in the masculine lead; William Courtenay, Lila Lee, Alec Bryron, Alec B. Francis and Dale Fuller. Directorial credit goes to Harvey Thew. Thew was also Miss Frederick's first Vitaphone venture.

"Red Hot Rhythm"

Walter O'Keefe, song writer, has been cast in Alan Hale's next Pathe production, "Red Hot Rhythm," which Leo McCarey will direct. Kathryn Crawford has the leading feminine role.

Continuing Shows

PLYMOUTH—"Skidding," a play of small town life in Idaho, with a wrangling family keeping the fun at high pitch.

MAJESTIC—"Follow Thru," a musical comedy, in which romance and golf are somewhat entangled. Lively dancing and engaging songs are mingled with gay frivolities.

COPLEY—"The Crooked Billet," a melodrama. Mr. Clive's first contribution to the current season. Full of chills, creeps and astonishment.

"Show of Shows"

Three separate choruses support Beatrice Lillie, the English comedienne, in "Show of Shows," featuring 100 headliners of stage, screen and vaudeville. One chorus consists of dancing dandies; a second is a group of bald-headed men, none of them under 50 years of age; a third is composed of tiny midgets, the tallest of whom is only three feet high. Miss Lillie's principal song will be "I've Got a Masculine Complex."

In War Film

BENNY DAVIS HEADLINES AT STATE

BENNY DAVIS, prolific song writer, is headlining with his gang at Loew's State.

As if spending most of spare hours composing popular songs and taking part in the management of a budding song publishing business were not enough, this tireless, young composer has taken upon himself the task of composing the musical score for Swanstrom and Connelly's "Tin Hats," the show which stars Boston's own Jack Donahue and which will have its American premiere as one of the local theaters October 27.

Benny Davis

Commencing with the war-time composition of "Good-By Broadway, Hello France," this young writer has rolled up a long record of popular song hits. "Jean," "Lost, a Wonderful Girl," "Dearest," "Mary Ann," "Baby Face," "O, How I Miss You Tonight," "Yearning," "A Smile Will Go A Long, Long Way" "Margie," "Nobody's Baby," "Carolina Moon," and a long list of other songs are products of his facile brain for song composition.

TEST WON HER FOR TALKIE

AN interesting story concerns itself with the placing of Ann Harding's name to a Pathe contract, and her selection for the featured role of "Paris Bound" as her first dialogue film, now at the Keith Albee. "Tired from strenuous work on the New York stage over a period of several years, the Broadway star went to California for a rest. One day Miss Harding was invited to have lunch at the Pathe studio with Frank Reicher, director of dialogue, who was about to begin work on "Paris Bound." After luncheon, Reicher proposed a screen test. She agreed.

Next day Reicher phoned her to come out and see the test. Before she left Reicher prevailed upon Miss Harding to affix her signature to a contract, and within a week rehearsals for "Paris Bound" were in progress.

Singer's Midgets at Loew's State Next Week

Twenty-two performers, whose average weight is less than 60 pounds, and most of whom are less than three feet in height, will provide the feature entertainment at Loew's State next week. They are members of the internationally famous troupe known as Singer's Midgets.

The midgets' act is a combination circus, musical extravaganza, athletic exhibition and fashion parade.

PAUL WHITEMAN SOON TO MAKE A MOVIE

By JOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11—Hold everything. Paul Whiteman and his merry band are not to be kept out in the cold. They are to make "the jazz king" under new conditions. Murray Anderson is being imported from New York by Universal to put his ideas into practical use and to see if a Whiteman revue cannot be put into a talkie.

Naturally neither Universal nor Paul Whiteman wants to admit failure in making a talkie. Too much money has been spent and too much publicity circulated to make it desirable for either Whiteman or the film company to sit down and admit a total loss.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., believes this catastrophe can be overcome when Murray Anderson takes charge. He will be here in three weeks with his complete staff, including a dance director, a chorus and other talent.

Anderson has just put on "Almanac," regarded a success in New York, so all Paul Whiteman has to do is to furnish music.

WITH a golden voice like Ramon Navarro's in the family, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer would be foolish indeed not to exploit it. Navarro has a naturally sweet singing voice and he has been studying for years with an idea that one day he might try grand opera. "The Rose of Troy," an operetta with a Spanish locale, on the order of "The Student Prince" is now being prepared for him by Bess Meredyth, with Robert Leonard, the director, offering expert advice. "The House of Troy" will be started in two or three weeks, giving Ramon only a short time to rest between pictures. He has but finished "The Battle of the Women," and now comes his first operetta. It is to be filmed in color.

CHARLIE FARRELL was not among those present at the wedding of his screen sweetheart, Janet Gaynor, to Lydell Peck. Charlie had big business that took him out of town. He is leaving, accompanied by Jack Francis for a tour of a number of the key cities, including Chicago, Detroit, Toronto, Boston and New York.

Victor McLaglen is just back from a tour of those same cities and box office returns in "The Cock-Eyed World" prove that personal appearances are a great help. Charlie is to make an appearance in connection with "Sunny Side Up," in which he and Janet Gaynor co-star. It opens at the Gaiety in New York for its world premiere.

IT was indeed a lucky day for Gregory Ratoff when he came to Los Angeles to play in "Kibitzer." Lucky because he happens to be a linquist and that is just what the film producers are looking for these days. He signed almost immediately to make a short subject for the Warner Brothers in three languages, Russian, German and English.

Bryan Foy will direct him and the title is "Knight of Industry." That isn't all about Ratoff either. One hears that he has had tests made for the principal role for "All Quiet On The Western Front", of course this is but a rumor but universal admits that it has many difficulties to find just the right person for the part and Ratoff seems to have personality along with acting ability.

THE Talkies are going to bring Blanche Sweet back to the screen. High time something gave her to us, for her admirers all over the country have been asking when Blanche was going to make a picture. She plays one of the important roles in "The Single Standard" which Robert Ober will direct for M-G-M. Blanche's friends are confident all she needs is a test with the microphone. Let's give the little girl a big, big hand. It surely will be good to see her again.

WITNESSES SAY MRS. PANTAGES WAS DRUNK

Los Angeles, Sept. 11 (AP)—The prosecution planned to introduce further testimony today in an attempt to prove Mrs. Lois Pantages, wife of the theater magnate, was intoxicated when her car collided with one driven by Juro Rokumoto, a Japanese.

Mrs. Pantages is on trial charged with second degree murder, it being alleged Rokumoto's death was due to the accident.

Witnesses testified Mrs. Pantages apparently was under the influence of liquor.

Harry J. Lederbrink, a contractor, said she failed to start at the traffic signal and that he stepped to the side of her car.

"She was very drunk," he said, "and swore at me."

Another witness, Cyril T. Holmes, a machinist, testified she drove into his automobile and he followed her to the scene of her collision with the Rokumoto car.

"She was driving crazily," he said, "and going 25 to 35 miles an hour. As we approached she swerved sharply to the left and her car hit a small sedan almost head-on. I saw Japanese children thrown through the top of the sedan."

Holmes pointed out Mrs. Pantages, who was seated near her husband, Alexander Pantages. The latter is facing trial Sept. 23, on two statutory charges brought by Eulice Pringle, 17.

Dr. A. F. Wagner, county autopsy surgeon, testified Rokumoto died from shock and injuries suffered in the collision.

COOLIDGE TELLS OF COURTSHIP

New York, Sept. 11—The courtship of Calvin Coolidge is told by the former President in the October issue of Hearst's International and Cosmopolitan magazine.

Coolidge tells of Miss Grace Goodhue's arrival in Northampton to "take training which would enable her to teach the deaf. When she had been there a year or so I met her and often took her to places of entertainment."

He then relates the anecdote of accompanying the now Mrs. Coolidge to a D. A. R. reception in 1904 and how they were asked to vacate their chairs for Governor and Mrs. Bates.

He writes:

"Fourteen years later, when we received sufficient returns to show I had been chosen Governor of Massachusetts, I turned to her and said, 'The Daughters of the American Revolution will not put us out of the Governor's chair now.'"

Of their marriage, Coolidge writes:

"We thought we were made for each other. For almost a quarter century she has borne with my infirmities and I have rejoiced in her graces."

Illinois Wars on Sign Board Evil

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 11 (AP)—Out of the zeal may come obliteration of the "sign board evil" in Illinois. The plan, a State enterprise, calls for the planting of trees and shrubs at unsightly places along the highways.

The departments of public works and public welfare already have begun work, concentrating the beautification program on the more outstanding eyesores. The idea is later to extend the program to the entire system of highways.

Cooling Devise for Phone Booths

London, Sept. 11 (INS)—An enterprising London hotel announced today that it had equipped the receivers of its transatlantic telephones with special cooling devices for the comfort of American visitors who spend long periods in the phone booths talking to folks at home.

Lady Heath to Stay in Hospital 2 Months

Cleveland, Sept. 11 (INS)—Lady Mary Heath will be confined in Lakeside hospital here probably two months, doctors indicated today. The English woman flier was injured in the national air races here when her plane crashed through the roof of a factory building.

40 Rum Indictments Due in Montpelier

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 11—The federal grand jury in session here was expected to return about 40 indictments for violations of the penal code in the illegal traffic in liquor.

Won't Doll Up for Love

Mrs. Bessie Schmierer of New York complained that another woman was stealing her husband, but refused to apply lipstick and rouge when advised by the magistrate to doll up and hold her husband's love, though she appears to be doing so here, at the request of the camera man, to the amusement of her children. Guard Witness in Bucket Shop Case

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP)—J. F. Dowd, state witness in the drive against bucket shops, has been given a police guard following threats that gangsters intended to kill him. Dowd, 30-year-old head of C. F. Dowd & Co., exposed the system used by the bucketeers in getting hundreds of thousands of dollars from gullible investors.

Fourteen Drown When Ship Sinks

London, Sept. 11 (INS)—Fourteen members of the crew of the Belgian steamship Estella were drowned today when the vessel was sunk in the river Scheldt in collision with an unknown German ship, said a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam. The Estella sank immediately.

COOLIDGE RARELY VOLUNTEERED ADVICE TO DEPARTMENT HEADS

FELT THAT THEY SHOULD DECIDE OWN PROBLEMS

Says If They Did Not Do the Work Properly the Remedy Was to Turn Them Out

THIS is the third of a series of articles on "What It Means to be President," by Calvin Coolidge.

By CALVIN COOLIDGE.
Article No. 3

AS he is the head of the government charged with making appointments, and clothed with the executive power, the President has a certain responsibility for the conduct of all departments, commissions, and independent bureaus.

While I was willing to advise with the men in charge of them and to give these officers any assistance in my power, I always felt they should make their own decisions and I rarely volunteered any advice.

Many applications are made requesting the President to influence these bodies, and such applications were usually transmitted to them for their information without comment.

Wherever they exercise judicial functions, I always felt that some impropriety might attach to any suggestions from me. The parties before them are entitled to a fair trial on the merits of their case, and to have judgment rendered by those to whom both sides have presented their evidence.

If someone on the outside undertook to interfere, even if grave injustice was not done, the integrity of a commission which comes from a knowledge that it can be relied on to exercise its own independent judgment would be very much impaired.

I never hesitated to ask commissions to speed up their work and get their business done, but if they were not doing it correctly, my remedy would be to supplant them with those who I thought would do better.

At one time the Shipping Board adopted a resolution declaring their independence of the President and claiming they were responsible solely to the Congress.

As I always considered they had a rather impossible task, I doubted whether anyone could be very successful in its performance. If they wished to try to relieve me of its responsibility, I had no personal objection and felt I should probably be saved from considerable criticism.

But they found they could not carry on their work without the support of the President so that some of them resigned and the remainder re-established their contact with the White House, which was always open to them.

Established Rules Followed

THE practice which I followed in my relations with commissions and in the recognition of rank has been long established.

President Jefferson seems to have entertained the opinion that even the Supreme Court should be influenced by his wishes, and that failing in this, a recalcitrant judge should be impeached by a complaisant Congress. This brought him into sharp conflict with John Marshall, who resisted any encroachment upon the independence of the court. In this controversy the position of Marshall has been vindicated.

It is also said that at some of his official dinners President Jefferson left all his guests to the confusion of taking whatever seat they could find at his table. But this method did not survive the test of history.

In spite of all the greatness, anyone who had as many ideas as Jefferson was bound to find that some of them would not work. But this does not detract from the wisdom of his faith in the people and his constant insistence that they be left to manage their own affairs.

Tradition and Custom Big Factors

His opposition to bureaucracy will bear careful analysis, and the country could stand a great deal more of its application. The trouble with us is that we talk about Jefferson but do not follow him. In his theory that the people should manage their government, and not be managed by it, he was everlastingly right.

TRADITION and custom, it will be seen, are often times determining factors in the Presidential office, as they are in all other walks of life.

This is not because they are arbitrary or artificial, but because long experience has demonstrated that they are the best methods of dealing with human affairs. Things are done in a certain way after many repetitions show that way causes the least friction and is most likely to bring the desired result. While there are times when the people might enjoy the spectacular, in the end they will be satisfied only with accomplishments.

Everything that the President does, potentially at least, is of such great importance that he must be constantly on guard. This applies not only to himself, but to everybody about him.

Not only in all his official actions, but in all his social intercourse, and even in his reaction and repose, he is constantly watched by a multitude of eyes to determine if there is anything unusual, extraordinary, or irregular, which can be set down in praise or in blame.

Often times trifling incidents, some insignificant action, an unfortunate phrase in an address, an injudicious letter, a lack of patience toward someone who presents an impossible proposition, too much attention of one person, or too little courtesy towards another, become magnified into the sensation of the hour.

While such events finally sink into their proper place in history as too small for consideration, if they occur frequently they create an atmosphere of distraction that might seriously interfere with the conduct of public business which is really important.

Presidential Protection

IT was my desire to maintain about the White House as far as possible an attitude of simplicity and not engage in anything that had an air of pretentious display.

That was my conception of the great office. It carries sufficient power within itself, so that it does not require any of the outward trappings of pomp and splendor for the purpose of creating an impression. It has a dignity of its own which makes it self-sufficient.

Of course, there should be proper formality, and personal relations should be conducted at all times with decorum and dignity, and in accordance with the best traditions of polite society. But there is no need of theatricals.

However much he may deplore it, the President ceases to be an ordinary citizen. In order to function at all, he has to be surrounded with many safeguards. If these were removed for only a short time, he would be overwhelmed by the people who would surge in upon him.

In traveling it would have been agreeable to me to use the regular trains which are open to the public. I did so once or twice. But I found it made great difficulty for the railroads. They reported that it was unsafe, because they could not take the necessary precautions. It therefore seemed best to run a second section, following a regular train, for the exclusive use of the President and his party.

While the facilities of a private car were always offered, I think they were used only once, when one was needed for the better comfort of Mrs. Coolidge during her illness.

Although I was not given to much travel during my term of office, it was sufficient to convince me that the Government should own a private car for the use of the President when he leaves Washington.

The pressure on him is so great, the responsibilities are so heavy, that it is wise public policy, in order to secure his best services, to provide him with such ample facilities that he will be relieved as far as possible from all physical inconveniences.

It is not generally understood how much detail is involved in any journey of the President. One or two secret service men must go to the destination several days in advance.

His line of travel and every street and location which he is to visit are carefully examined. The order of ceremonies has to be submitted for approval. Oftentimes the local police are inadequate, so that it is necessary to use some of the military or naval forces to assist them.

Public Appearances Lessened by Radio

NOT only his aides and his personal physician, but also secret service men, some of his office force, and house servants, have to be in attendance. Quarters must also be provided for a large retinue of newspaper reporters and cameramen who follow him upon all occasions. Every switch that he goes over is spiked down. Every freight train that he passes is stopped and every passenger train slowed down to ten miles per hour.

While all of this proceeds smoothly, it requires careful attention to a great variety of details.

It was never my practice to speak from rear platforms. The confusion is so great that few people could have heard, and it does not seem to me very dignified. When the President speaks it ought to be an event.

The excuse of such appearances which formerly existed has been eliminated by the coming of the radio. It is so often that the President is on the air that almost anyone who wishes has ample opportunity to hear his voice.

It seemed more appropriate for Mrs. Coolidge and me to appear at the rear of the train where the people could see us.

About the only time that I spoke was at Bennington in September of 1928, where I expressed my affection and respect for the people of the state of Vermont, as I was passing through that town on my way back to Washington. I found that the love I had for the hills where I was born touched a responsive chord in the hearts of the whole nation.

LISTENING IN

By BERT BROCKBANK.

THIRTY-THREE of the world's most famous operas will be presented by the National Grand Opera company through a coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Co. during the 1929-1930 season. An hour and a half will be devoted each week to the presentations, according to an announcement today. "Cavalleria Rusticana," by Mascagni, will open the season the night of Sept. 15, the broadcast beginning at 10:30. Cesare Sodero will direct and conduct the operas during the entire season.

Four operas seldom if ever heard on the air are included in the list of those to be presented. They are "Snegourichka," Rimsky-Korsakoff; "Sneguritchka," Massenet's "La Navarraise," Skilton's "Sun Bride," and "Halka," by Moniuska. "Russian Shadows," written by Cesare Sodero and given its world premiere through the NBC system last spring, will be repeated this season and will be presented in two parts, the nights of Feb. 12 and 19. "La Traviata" will be the second presentation, Sept. 25. The third will be "Carmen," on Oct. 2.

GLAZOUNOFF'S arrangement of a Chopin Etude will be played by Ossip Giskin, 'cellist, during the Voice of Columbia program to be broadcast from WNAC at 8 o'clock this evening. Born in Odessa in 1898, Goskin studied at St. Petersburg under the court 'cellist at the Imperial School of Music and graduated with the grand prix. "Una Voce Poco Fa," from "The Barber of Seville," will be sung by Ethel Codd, and William Anison will be heard in "Chelo a Mar." Helen Oelheim will render "Adieu Foret," from "Jeanne D'Arc."

Melodies of the concert and music halls, including such favorites as Kreisler's "Caprice Viennois" and Friml's "Indian Love Call," feature tonight's Twilight Musicale through WBZ and associated NBC stations. The Los Angeles team, Jan. 6th and Harry Kogen, will be assisting artists. The program is as follows:

"In the Hall of the Mountain King," Grieg, orchestra; "My Book of Broken Dreams," trio; "Mighty Lak' a Rose," Nevin, string orchestra; "Caprice Viennois," Kreisler, orchestra; "When Day Is Done," trio; "Barcarolle," Offenbach, "Allah's Holiday," "Indian Love Call," Friml, orchestra.

WORKS of Georges Bizet, famous French composer, will predominate in the Mobilgil concert, coming from New York through WEEI at 8 o'clock.

The orchestra, under the direction of Erno Rapee, will play the "Carmen" suite, "Michaela's Aria" from this same opera will be sung by Gladys Rice, soprano. Harold van Duzee, tenor, and Douglas Stanbury, baritone, will sing the duet from one of Bizet's earlier operas, "The Pearl Fishers." The complete program follows:

Suite, from "Carmen," Bizet, orchestra; "Agnus Dei," Bizet, tenor solo, Harold van Duzee; "Serenade Espagnol," Albeniz, orchestra; "Micaela's Aria," from "Carmen," Bizet, soprano solo, Gladys Rice; duet, from "The Pearl Fishers," Bizet, tenor and baritone solos, Harold van Duzee and Douglas Stanbury; "Menuetto and Farandole," from "L'Arleisienne" suite, Bizet, orchestra.

MUSICAL descriptions of a recoil march and a gypsy dance are varied with selections by Liszt and Schubert in the concert which a 48-piece orchestra will broadcast during the Stromberg Carlson hour from WBZ. Guy Fraser Harris is will conduct, and the program is as follows:

"Creole Triumphal March," Kriens; "Consolation, No. 3," Liszt; "Flight of the Bumble Bee," Rimsky - Korsakoff; "Rosamund Overture," Schubert; excerpts from "Sylvia" (ballet), Delibes, "Valse Lente," "Pizzicato Polka"; "Gypsy Dance," German.

THE game sensation that has swept America. The rules are simple. You are given, for instance, the word "tear" to unscramble with the letter "h." The Anagramble is "heart." Similarly, to unscramble the word "link" with "s" the Anagramble is "slink."

Remember, you cannot make an Anagramble with a plural—"links" would be wrong. You have to change the complete meaning of the word—"slink" is therefore correct. Nor can you make a different tense of word. For instance, to unscramble "read" with "s" you cannot make it "reads."

You must change the complete meaning. The Anagramble, therefore, is "dears." Now try your hand at these Anagrambles.

(1) ARDENT—Unscramble it with a V.
(2) LIVER—Unscramble it with an L.
(3) WRATH—Unscramble it with an M.
(4) BARREL—Unscramble it with a W.
(5) TWINE—Unscramble it with an R.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

CADILLAC HAS COMPLETE NEW LINE OF CARS

Detroit, Sept. 11—The Cadillac Motor Car Co. next Monday will introduce throughout the country a complete line of Cadillac, LaSalle and Fleetwood cars, Lawrence P. Fisher, president and general manager, said today. They will be the roomiest, fastest, most powerful and finest built cars the company has ever produced.

Thirty-two new body styles will be offered on the Cadillac and LaSalle chassis. Many improvements and innovations will be found throughout the chassis and bodies. Outstanding among these are refinements to the braking and synchro-mesh transmission, greatly improved steering system, more efficient carburetion and easier starting.

Fisher points out that other improvements have made the cars the easiest to handle, the most comfortable, most flexible and faster in traffic than any previous Cadillac products. The V-type eight-cylinder engines in both chasses are larger than in the preceding models.

TIRE CO. NAMES COOK MANAGER

H. E. Crooker, New England district sales manager for the U. S. Rubber Co., announced the appointment of H. E. Cook as Boston branch sales manager.

Mr. Cook comes to Boston with a record of 26 years service with the U. S. Tire Co. He has been branch sales manager for five years each at Baltimore and Washington.

"We are pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. Cook as branch manager for Boston," said Mr. Crooker. "His long experience in the industry well fits him for this position. His appointment is part of our general reorganization and expansion all over the country."

MOTOR CAR A. A. STARTS SOON

Plans which had their inception several weeks ago for the establishment of a motor car athletic association are rapidly drawing to a head, and it is expected that this organization will start its activities within the next two weeks.

From the present outlook the companies which will be members of this association are those representing Cadillac, Packard, Marmon, Buick, Nash, Chrysler, Willys-Knight, Dodge, Oldsmobile, Cadillac, Hupmobile, Hudson-Essex, Chevrolet, General Motors truck and Mack truck. While the main purpose of this association will be to sponsor athletic activities among its members, it is also planned to have several social functions during the course of the year.

The first activity of the season will be a bowling league, the schedule for which will be announced shortly.

BIG CROWDS SEE NEW CORD CAR

Auburn, Indiana, Sept. 11—More than a million and a half persons visited Auburn show rooms to view the new Cord Front-Drive automobile the first three days of its showing.

Figures compiled at the factory here from reports sent in by dealers show that all records were broken in the size of crowds gathered to view a car above $1000. Actual sales made by dealers of persons visiting the show rooms and daily reports sent to the factory.

Metropolitan New York crowds were so heavy that many times during the day lines were formed from the show rooms to the streets.

Extra Courtroom Is Opened at Chelsea

The formal opening of the new second session courtroom at Chelsea District Court took place when Judge George M Stearns, escorted by Clerk Joseph M. Curley, took his place on the bench. The quarters had formerly been occupied by the United Spanish War Veterans' Association. The second session will be used chiefly for civil business.

London, Sept. 11—Shipping disasters were estimated tonight to have cost the Marine Insurance Market in London about $2,500,000. At Lloyd's it was thought that the stranding of the Nelson liner Highland Pride off Vigo, Spain, would cost about $1,750,000.

BUICK SOLVES WHEEL WHIP

Steering wheel whip, or the tendency of the wheel to wrench itself out of the hands of the driver when traveling rapidly over rough roads, has been solved in the 1930 Buick. For years the problem of eliminating this dangerous and exasperating whip in the wheel has stubbornly resisted the efforts of automotive engineers. It is solved on the new Buick by the addition of a simple device attached to the front shackle of the front spring on the steering gear side.

The road shock eliminator is as simple in construction as it is effective in operation. In designing the new car, the Buick engineers, instead of pinning the front end of the front spring immovably to the frame, shackled it so that the spring may play back and forth at this point as well as at the rear, but the play of the front shackle is modulated by mounting two stiff coil springs at either side of the bottom of the shackle.

Ordinarily these stiff springs hold the front shackle stationary, the main play being in the rear shackle, but if the surface of the road is unusually rough the front shackle will yield, the stiff spring in this special shackle taking up the shock of the impact and preventing it from reaching the steering wheel.

The result is that when a severe bump is struck the force of the jolt, instead of being carried up to the steering wheel, is spent in forcing the axle back slightly on the steering gear side due to the give of the heavy springs in the road shock eliminator. The steering wheel remains steady in the hands of the driver, instead of twisting as each bump is encountered, and the car can be driven safely over rough roads at speeds that are hazardous without this device.

PIERCE OPENS NEW BUILDING

Everything is set for the official opening of Pierce-Arrow's beautiful new building, situated at Commonwealth ave. and Alcorn st., in what is known as Boston's aristocratic automobile section.

The formal opening will be on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. One of the features will be the showing for the first time in Boston, all of the latest creations in body designs by America's foremost in body builders. These are by Willoughby, Dietrich, Holbrook, Judkins, Brunn and Pierce-Arrow.

Visitors to the reception and preview on these days will find much to admire in the new building. Both from an architectural and building standpoint, as well as from the angle of the business man, the new building embodies every ideal in the modern trend.

From Commonwealth ave. one gets a very meagre idea, from a fleeting glance at the building of the wealth of interest which the building contains. It is much larger than one would imagine.

It is a three-story structure, having a frontage of 100 feet on Commonwealth ave., 304 feet on Alcorn st. and 100 feet on Gardner st., all above ground. The building is of the most modern construction throughout, being built of reinforced concrete, with brick spandrels. It was constructed by the F. J. Van Etten Co. and was built under the personal supervision of Victor Gelini, a well-known Boston structural engineer.

Files $10,000 Suit to Recover Estate

Alleging that the late Carl F. W. Ellinger, a real estate dealer, formerly of Cedar st., Roxbury, promised to leave him his entire estate out of love and gratitude for services to him, Annie S. Wtion of Boston filed a $10,000 suit against Arthur E. Digan of Meridian st., East Boston, the administrator, to recover the entire estate.

FRANKLIN SETS NEW AUGUST RECORD

Despite the usual late summer slump in the automotive industry generally, the Franklin Automobile Company of Syracuse, N. Y., during August broke all previous shipping and sales records for this month and continued the sensational pace which has marked the company's trade and financial expansion since the first of the year, says R. E. Frost, general manager, Franklin Motor Car Co., of Boston.

The Franklin company shipped 1150 cars dring the month which compares with shipments of 735 cars during August of last year. The largest previous August was in 1917 when the company shipped 1133 cars. Even more significant than the shipment figures are the total number of cars sold at retail during the month. This year, there were approximately 1000 Franklin cars sold at retail as compared with 810 cars sold during the largest previous August. The company's total shipments for the first eight months of the year reached 11,201 cars as compared with 10,566 cars in the largest previous year.

How this unusual trade activity is reflected in the vastly improved financial position of the company is indicated by the fact that the company increased its net earnings by nearly one million dollars during the first seven months of the current year over the corresponding period of last year. Net earnings of the company during the first seven months of 1929 were $1,447,937.41 which is equal to $3.77 earned per share on the common stock after preferred dividends, taxes and other charges. This compares with $519,031.13 or 72 cents a share earned during the first seven months of 1928.

NEW METHOD TO MEASURE TIRE

A new method of marking tire sizes has done much to lift the mystery of just what the figures imprinted on a tire mean, according to B. J. Lemon, field engineer of the Tire Development Division of the United States Rubber Company. Under the new method of marking, it was explained by Lemon, only two figures, separated by a dash are used, telling the dimension of the tire and removing any misunderstanding as to the tire's size.

As a result of this change, tires are now appearing on the market bearing only one marking, the new method. For the past year they have carried two imprints, one the new and one the old style. Action taken by the Society of Automotive Engineers at its annual meeting at Saranac Lake, however, resulted in the elimination of the dual marking.

Under the new method, it was explained by Lemon, the first number means the tire's cross sectional dimension while the second number is the diameter of the rim in inches. For example, 5.00-19 means that the tire's cross section is approximately five inches while the rim's diameter is 19 inches. Under the old system the height of the tire from the road to the top was taken and used with the tire's cross section. Thus this same tire formerly was marked 29x5.00, meaning that the tire was 29 inches from the ground to its top and that the cross section was five inches.

This old method, however, was inaccurate, owing to variation in different tires. Hence, action was taken by the S. A. E. to bring about a more accurate marking. This was done so that the automotive engineers might have a set standard of size in the selection of tires as every tire now marked is exact on its rim diameter.

LONGWAY NEW BUICK MANAGER

Appointment of Robert T Longway as assistant general manager of the Buick Motor Co. has been announced by E. T. Strong, president and general manager.

R. T. Longway

The new assistant general manager has been associated with the automobile industry for the last 22 years, beginning with the Weston Mott Co. in 1907. When the latter concern was absorbed by Buick nine years ago, Mr. Longway became an official of that company.

Firemen Confess to Setting Five Fires

Glen Cove, N. Y., Sept 11—Eight volunteer firemen who, according to police, confessed that the thrill of the roaring engines and screaming sirens led them to start five fires in the last four years, were charged with arson and released in $5000 bail each, pending grand jury action.

Practically every employe of the Stutz company has already joined the new association.

According to Col. E. S. Gorrell, president of the Stutz Motor Car Co., the S. E. M. B. A. will provide group insurance and sick benefits for members, promote intra-plant safety and accident prevention, and encourage educational, social and athletic activities. A number of interesting events have been arranged for the near future.

BIG DEMAND FOR NEW WILLYS

The Willys-Overland Company announces that production schedules of the new Willys-Knight Great Six line recently introduced are being rapidly stepped ahead in order to meet the influx of orders that immediately followed the presentation of the new cars. With thousands of unfilled orders on the books, it will be necessary to maintain peak output of the new Knight engined sixes.

Willys-Overland dealers throughout the country report that never in the history of the company has any Willys-Overland product met such a wide acclaim as the new Great Six. These cars have been characterized as the greatest achievement in the history of the company, both from an artistic as well as a mechanical standpoint.

THE New BUICK

New Controlled Servo Enclosed brakes

unrivalled for smooth, sure, silent operation in any weather . . .

To Buick, pioneer of four-wheel brakes, now falls the distinction of another major achievement in this same vital field: the development and introduction of Buick Controlled Servo Enclosed Brakes—the most effective four-wheel braking system ever devised for any automobile!

Buick's new brakes are of the highly efficient internal-expanding type. They are fully enclosed—fully protected against dust, dirt and water—and thus assure maximum braking effectiveness under all weather conditions.

They represent the highest development of the self-energizing principle, which makes the car's own motion provide part of the braking effort. They reveal unmatched responsiveness to the slightest pedal pressure. And they are so perfectly controlled that "grabbing" is entirely unknown! When you apply these brakes, you obtain the most positive, as well as the smoothest and most silent action you have ever experienced in any automobile!

Drive the new Buick! Test not only its matchless new brakes but its brilliant all-round performance, riding comfort and driving ease—all of which combine to establish the new Buick as the greatest value ever offered in the fine car field!

CHARGES JUDGE WAS SLAIN

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—A charge that a police magistrate who died several weeks ago supposedly of a heart attack, was secretly beaten the same day for declining to pay $30,000 for reappointment, was made at a political rally last night.

Leonard V. Broderick, who is succeeding the power of Andrew B. Keating, Tammany leader on the upper West Side, said Magistrate Andrew Macrery who had been reappointed for a ten-year term a week before his death, had been unable to raise the $30,000 demand. Mr. Broderick said Wallace Macrery, brother, planned to ask an investigation by the district attorney and exhumation of his brother's body.

Magistrate Macrery died Aug 21 in the office of Dr. Max Greenwald where he was taken after complaining of illness at a conference with associates.

Dr. Greenwald declared it was "ridiculous to think there was anything suspicious in the death."

Electricity to Be Used to Kill Whales Now

Washington, Sept. 11—The shock that Jonah got when he found himself swallowed by the Biblical whale was nothing compared with what's in store for descendants of that historic animal at the present time.

Reports to the commerce department from Oslo, Norway, tell of the development of an electrical method for killing whales, soon to be put into general effect by whaling vessels.

The whale is electrocuted, rather than harpooned. It dies instantly, and the body remains afloat.

Find Woman, Seized 30 Yrs. Ago by Maoris

Auckland, New Zealand (AP)—Kidnaped by Maoris in childhood and eventually married to a native chief, a white woman has been restored to her relatives after nearly 30 years.

When six years old, Caroline Perrett went to tend the cows on her parents' farm at Taranaki, in the north island of New Zealand and disappeared. It was believed she was carried off by Maoris in revenge for the disturbance of their burial ground to make way for a railway.

A niece a few days ago saw a white woman with the Maoris at Tanaetua and, struck by the family likeness questioned her. She said she had been with the Maoris all her life.

The niece asked her to show her neck, as she knew that when a child the aunt had fallen across a hot grate, which left a scar. The woman bore this mark.

305 famous Beauty Shops say, "Give your hands

RECENTLY, 305 of the finest beauty salons in the United States reported this interesting fact—

"With all our experience,"—these experts said—"we cannot distinguish between hands that never wash dishes and hands that use Lux in the dishpan. . . . Evidently, Lux gives real beauty care."

Isn't this a startling idea? Yet women instinctively know it is true. Washing their fine things in the gorgeously sparkling Lux suds, women themselves noticed how smooth and white their hands looked afterward.

Now they are washing dishes with Lux to give their hands the same gentle beauty care—three times a day!

The secret is simple . . .

Lux is so utterly pure, so delicately refined by the special process used in its making, that it protects the precious beauty oils—the youth oils—of the skin. Many soaps dry up these oils, leave the skin parched—red and drawn looking.

Best of all, this beauty care costs almost nothing. Lux for all your dishes costs less than 1¢ a day!

Such Inexpensive Beauty Care— Lux in the dishpan is the wisest, most inexpensive beauty care known! Gives gentle, soothing care to your hands—with no extra time, no trouble—and costs less than 1¢ a day.

PALESTINE'S TAG DAY SCORES BIG SUCCESS

Boy Faces Seven Charges in Auto Theft Case

MISS JULIA A. MURPHY, SUPERVISOR of the 110 playgrounds open to the city's school children during the summer, says this has been the best playground season ever. Credit for a great part of the success Miss Murphy gives to the co-operation of Commissioner Long of the park department and to the press, keeping very little for herself.

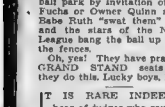
You will be surprised to know that dental work was a part of the big job carried on in the playgrounds. Now that the season has been closed, 500 dolls and thousands of other playthings have been put away to be given to youngsters who need them at Christmas time.

BY THE WAY, ONE OF THE big things of the playground work was the operation of the now "Knot Hole Gang." Of course, the real "knot holers" originated some years ago when you and I were young, Johnny. Then the actual members of the "Knot Hole Gang" crept up to the fence at Walpole st. and watched the baseball hero of that day, Mike Kelley, "swat them."

But today your knot hole gang has no use for the old type of viewing of baseball scenery. Oh, no! The gang goes out to either ball park by invitation of Judge Fuchs or Owner Quinn and see Babe Ruth "swat them" around and the stars of the National League bang the ball up against the fences.

Oh, yes! They have practically GRAND STAND seats when they do this. Lucky boys, I'll say.

IT IS RARE INDEED TO hear of judges who say directly to neophytic lawyers "If you don't like the way I conduct my court you can come back at me," or words to that effect. Judge James M. Morton, Jr., advised the new lawyers who were admitted to practice in the Federal District court to come right back if he attacked them during a trial and their case warranted such action. Plenty of latitude for the fighting type of lawyer I have in mind a few of the chip-on-the-shoulder type of advocates who never needed Judge Morton's advice, and who got along quite nicely in the courts, too. You know them but "I'll name no names."



NEW ENGLAND MANUFACTURERS of rayon and artificial silk are showing interest in the use of the "sour" in vinegar to make better artifical silk. What is actually done is to take the acetic acid out of the vinegar and, in combination with cellulose, turn out a product that for fineness would put the silk worm to shame. I met a Lawrence mill man who is enthusiastic over the new idea. "If this turns out as indicated by the research men who discovered it, women's underthings will be better and cheaper than ever, and New England industry will be greatly helped."

DR. WILLIAM J. McNALLY, whose principle aimness is the health of the Boston fire department, is going to Detroit this month to discuss what may be done in coping with dangers to firemen from poison gas.

Celluloid fires are very dangerous and cannot be fought except with gas masks, but the Cleveland disaster shows that greater precautions are necessary. There are guesses against which the present mask is no protection.

Dr. McNally is instructed to go the limit in protecting the Boston firemen. He expects to bring back from Detroit something valuable.

OF COURSE THERE IS a big shortage of water throughout Massachusetts and in many places in northern New York and even in mountainous Pennsylvania. I was told by a woman visitor from that state the other day.

Now we learn from far-off Germany that bathtubs in Berlin are sealed so that surreptitious use may not be made of them by fussily clean Germans. There's a water shortage for you! X. H. Goodnough, director and chief engineer of the division of sanitary engineering, department of public health, says there is no great cause for alarm in Massachusetts. Of course, he admits that water is not as plentiful as it has been in some years, but that there is no danger of water getting so scarce that the official plumber will call and plug up the taps in our bathtubs.

CHIEF URQUHART of the Arlington police is delighted with the new traffic lights which have been installed in the town and which not only make for safety but for speedier movement of traffic.

JEWS' TAG DAY SCORES BIG TRIUMPH

Committee in Charge Sure $15,000 Sought Is More Than Paid in

The tag day for Jewish sufferers in Palestine, held throughout Greater Boston, was a huge success, according to preliminary reports received when the day was officially closed.

Although complete reports were not available, Mrs. A. E. Wagman, chairman of the tag day committee, believed that the $15,000 which the women hoped to obtain has been secured.

"The results are most gratifying," said she. "The public responded beyond all expectations. Both the committee and the women who volunteered to collect the fund wish to thank heartily all who contributed to this work of relief for the suffering Jews of Palestine.

"I am sure the goodwill expressed by the public response to our appeal will make for a better understanding both here and in Palestine, where the need of goodwill is so great in the clash of conflicting interests."

Mrs. Wagman stated that just as soon as the total amount of the collections had been determined she would announce the sum.

RESPONSE LIBERAL

More than 1000 members of Hadassah, the women's organization that supports five hospitals and various child welfare stations in Palestine; the junior Hadassah, The Young Men's and the Young Women's Hebrew Associations, and the Jewish Legion, volunteered their services as collectors.

The response was so great that the committee feels it could have used 500 more collectors if the generosity of the public had been anticipated.

Assisting Mrs. Wagman in the work of the tag day committee were Mrs. Lewis Goldberg, president of the Boston chapter of Hadassah; Miss Hannah Goldberg, chairman of the junior Hadassah; Mrs. Albert Salter, president of the New England Conference of Hadassah; Mrs. Lourie, wife of Judge David A. Lourie, and a former president of Hadassah; Mrs. Max Kalman, financial secretary, and Mrs. George Wyner, treasurer.

$26,193 FUND TOTAL

The supervisors who looked after the collectors included Mrs. Nathan Album of Brookline, Mrs. Frank Yaner of Brighton, Mrs. Max Simberg of Dorchester, Miss Gertrude Oppenheim, who worked in the South End; Mrs. S. W. Myers, West End; Mrs. Alex Surmon, Park sq., and Mrs. M. Finkelstein, Mattapan.

All the money collected will be turned over to the Palestine Emergency Relief Fund, of which A. C. Ratshesky, chairman of the Red Cross, is general chairman and national committeeman.

Ratshesky today meets all workers connected with the relief fund at a luncheon in the City Club at 12:30 noon, when the situation in Palestine will be discussed with the aid of cables recently received from the scene of the outrages.

The Palestine Emergency Relief Fund has reached a total of $26,493.33 according to Ratshesky.

LIVERMORE'S BURIAL FRIDAY

The funeral of Harris Livermore, Boston financier and shipping man, who lost his life in the crash of the Transcontinental Air Transport plane City of San Francisco in New Mexico, last week, will be held on Friday. Services will take place at 2 o'clock in King's Chapel.

As a mark of respect to Mr. Livermore, flags on all the steamers of the Counsilman Transportation Corporation, of which he was president, are at half mast and will remain so until after the funeral.

The flags at the Boston Chamber of Commerce, of which he was a director, were also put at half staff in tribute to him. The body of Livermore, one of eight victims of the disaster, was recovered from the wrecked air liner on Sunday, and is now on the way to Boston in custody of his brother.

Marine Society Elects Rutledge

At a special meeting of the Boston Marine Society, Capt. William E. Rutledge of Belmont was elected port warden at Boston, to succeed the late Capt. Walter Ervin.

The meeting was one of the biggest the society has had in recent years.

For the first time in months, the Board of Port Wardens is now complete. The other members are Capt. H. W. Hammett, senior; Capt. Millard F. Wade and Capt. Otis W. Clark.

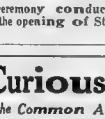
THE QUESTION

Should wives use cosmetics to keep their husbands' love?



FRANCIS J. CAREY, Exeter st.—I am not married but from observation of married couples it seems to me that some women would need to use paint and powder, judiciously applied, to retain the affections of their husbands. There is no excuse, though, for any of the women decorating their lips crimson by using lipsticks. Cleanliness of a woman demands use of face powder and perhaps a little paint on her cheeks will help keep her attractive to her husband.

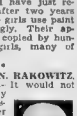
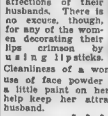
PAUL R. HARDENBROOK, Commonwealth ave., Back Bay—The advice of the Brooklyn magistrate who requested a woman to doll up in rouge, powder and lipstick paint in an effort to retain her husband's love would not be necessary if there was love between the couple. Nothing is worse than to see a woman's face decorated with paint. I also draw the line on women using lipsticks, which makes them resemble clowns in a circus. To retain a man's love it is up to the woman herself. I know that nothing could ever happen to my wife's looks, even if she were disfigured in a bad accident, which would change my love for her. I have just returned to Boston after two years in Maine, where the girls use paint and powder sparingly. Their appearance should be copied by hundreds of Boston girls, many of whom are married.

* * *



MRS. MARJORIE N. RAKOWITZ, Second st., Chelsea—It would not be necessary for any woman to use cosmetics to hold her husband's love. If it takes a coat of paint to make a man love his wife, let her use it to please him. A woman who is a good cook and is neat in her appearance should be all that is required of a wife. Of course it goes without saying, that she is also a faithful life partner and does not form the habit of going with other men. I never use a lipstick and I know that my husband loves me more than he would if he ever found scarlet paint coating my lips.

* * *



MISS ANNIE LEMARCH, Second st., Chelsea—If I had a husband and he did not love me without being painted up like a ballet dancer, I would not care to hold his love. Be yourself, at all times is my motto. The judge who advised that young married woman in Brooklyn to try and hold her husband by making her into an artificial symbol of her own true self, does not appear to know men or women. The only way to keep a man's love is to show you are fond of him, and cooling him along as if he were a child. Then when the husband feels how important he is in your estimation it will be easy to make him think he is appreciated and he will always love you whether you doll up in painted cheeks and rouged lips or keep your complexion clear by use of good soap and plenty of water.

She Sues City for New Pair of Shoes

Mrs. Marion C Howland of Newton wants the city to buy her a new pair of shoes.

Mrs. Howland has filed a claim for $10.75 for damage alleged to have been caused to her shoes as she stepped in the soft tar at Washington st. and Center ave., Newton. She states in her claim that she was unable to have the tar removed from the shoes and the footwear proved a total loss.

2 STATES FIGHT FOR RIGHT TO TRY SUSPECT

Massachusetts and New Jersey have begun a legal battle for the custody of Byron Jones, alias Byron Doucaire, charged with robbing the home of Mrs. Sydney E. Hutchinson, Beverly, of $500,000 in gems.

General Sessions Judge Max S. Levine, New York, signed papers waiving jurisdiction on Jones after Chief of Police John S. Welch, Beverly, appeared in court with a warrant for the accused.

Jones has been confined in the tombs since his arrest in New York on three charges, bringing stolen property into the State, felonious assault and violation of the Sullivan law.

When Chief Welch went to the tombs to get Jones, he discovered that a detainer had been issued recently for Jones by the New Jersey authorities. Jones is charged with having escaped early last spring from the Trenton prison, where he was serving a 20-year sentence for robbery.

Chief Welch immediately began negotiations with New Jersey officials to have the detainer voided so that Jones can be brought back to Massachusetts. Welch declared that Massachusetts authorities have a certain case against Jones.

In the meantime, Jones will be held at the tombs pending the settlement of the matter of jurisdiction between New Jersey and Massachusetts.

Cop Is Exonerated of Neglect Charge

Patrolman John F. Condon of the Milton police department, who a few weeks ago was sentenced to 35 hours punishment duty for failure to pull a duty call from a signal box, was exonerated when the board of selectmen gave him the public hearing which he demanded. He claimed that he pulled the box but that the call did not register because the signal system is antiquated.

They smashed the portal and claim to have found two Chinese smoking what is alleged to have been opium.

BIG SHIP TO BE BUILT AT FORE RIVER YARD

The Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Quincy, has just won an important shipbuilding contract, one that will assure steady employment there for more than a year to a large number of skilled workmen.

Announcement was made that a steamship will be built at the yard, construction to start shortly, for the Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies Co. It is to be a combination passenger and freight ship, to ply between New York and San Juan, Porto Rico.

The new ship will cost $2,500,000, and will be completed in January, 1931. Her speed will be 16 knots, and her furnishings and equipment the latest and best that can be procured.

She is the third big ship ordered recently by the A. G. W. I. group, two fast, electric-driven steamers for the Ward Line service from New York to Havana, being under way at Newport News, Va.

THIEVES TAKE RUG AND FLEE

Thieves executed an unusual stunt when they moved the furniture around the room and took the oriental rug from the floor in the home of Ned C. Loud, chairman of the Wakefield Board of Selectmen. They also took some silver plate and escaped.

The raid on the house was made while Mrs. Loud had left her home, on Parker rd., and had gone on a shopping tour. When she came back she found that the screen had been cut from the door for an entrance and that the thieves had not only got away with the rug and plate but also had other articles piled up ready to take. The rug was valued at $400.

Invited to Ride, Ousts Owner; Gets 5 Years

When Albert Mazurek of Prospect st., Arlington, invites a couple of friends on an automobile ride, he at least expects the privilege of mapping the route and driving his own machine.

John Gillis of West Cottage st., Roxbury, and George M. Shaw of Worcester ave., South Boston, however, objected when Mazurek exercised this privilege. It was testified in superior court, with the result that Mazurek was ousted from his own machine, and received a beating for good measure.

Because of his previous record, Shaw was sentenced to five years and a day in Concord Reformatory, while Gillis was placed on probation.

Mazurek told Chief Justice Hall when Gillis and Shaw were placed on trial charged with appropriating his machine, that he invited Shaw first, and during the ride they picked up Gillis. Liquor was passed, as a means of good fellowship, it was testified, and Mazurek asked Shaw to do the chauffeuring, and the ride continued to Nantasket.

A fight developed and Mazurek was ousted from the machine.

Kelley was charged with larceny of an automobile, using an automobile without authority, operating without a license, operating without registration, failing to stop on signal of a police officer, operating an automobile so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public, and profanity.

He pleaded not guilty to all the charges and was held in $500 bail for a hearing on September 16.

GOLDEN RULE MINISTER WANTS AUTO BACK, NO QUESTIONS ASKED

HE'S STRANDED BY THEFT OF NEW COUPE

Didn't Carry Insurance on It Because of Faith in Human Nature

Faith in the Golden Rule caused the Rev. Lionel T. DeForest, youthful graduate of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, to fail to insure against theft the brand new light coupe which he bought with the last of his savings.

Today the young minister was minus auto and money and was facing the necessity of abandoning a projected journey to Colorado, where he has been appointed missionary.

Thieves, to whom the Golden Rule would sound like just one more wise crack, took DeForest's car from its parking place in front of the Theological Seminary, Brattle st., Cambridge. Police have been unable to recover the machine.

MUST START OVER

Having planned to make the journey West in his auto, DeForest did not retain enough cash for his railroad fare. Furthermore, the nature of his intended work is such that he would be obliged to use a motor car there. His district in Colorado covers 60 square miles.

"It seems that I'll have to relinquish the post until I have gone to work here and earned a new capital," the young minister declared ruefully today. "However, I'm still strong in my faith that the culprit will have a chance of heart. I feel that the car might have been returned to me already, if the thief knew how to accomplish the restitution without too great risk to himself."

ONLY WANTS CAR BACK.

"Not to secure the apprehension and punishment of the wrong-doer, but rather to give the offender a fair chance to make things right," the Rev. Mr. DeForest told his story to the Boston Evening American.

The lost car is a 1929 Ford coupe, painted dark blue with black wheels. It bore the Massachusetts registration number, 670587. Its engine number is 24,706,596.

IRELAND GRAND MASTER FETED BY MASONS

The Earl of Donoughmore, Knocklofty, Ireland, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, 72d degree Masons of England and Wales, and Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Masons in Ireland, was a guest at the luncheon and quarterly communication of the Grand Lodge of Masons in Massachusetts, at Masonic Temple, Boylston st., today.

The Irish Masonic chief, who with his wife is making a brief visit to the United States, was taken on a sight-seeing tour in Boston and its environs today by Leon M. Abbott, Sovereign Grand Commander of the Scottish Rite Masons in Massachusetts.

ON TOUR OF CITY

The tour included a visit to Harvard College and other educational and civic institutions, the old State House and other historic shrines, and a drive through park systems. The Earl of Donoughmore had high praise for the attractions in and around Boston and remarked that the city is charming in the extreme.

Following his brief stay in Boston, the Masonic chief in Ireland will journey to Dayton, Ohio, where he will attend the congress of the supreme council of Masonic lodges.

Lady Donoughmore has remained in New York with Lord Suirdale, son of the distinguished couple, who is connected with the international banking house of W. R. Grace & Co.

PROMINENT IN BRITAIN

The Earl of Donoughmore is Sir Richard Walter John Hely-Hutchinson. He has had a distinguished career in the British Parliament and the British Foreign Service. At one time he was private secretary to the Governor of Hong Kong, China. Later he was a civil member of the British Army Council. Since 1911 he has been chairman of committees and deputy speaker of the House of Lords, and since 1903, has been a member of the London school board.

During the World War the Earl was captain in the Royal Irish Regiment. He wears the insignia of the Order of Leopold of Belgium.

Asked as to the strength of Masonic lodges in Ireland, the Earl said that there are several hundred lodges of Masons in the organization of which he is chief. Lodges are numerous in the north, quite generally throughout all Ireland. The order has 100 lodges in New Zealand.

Fall River Mayor Plans Own Bake

Fall River, Sept. 11—Stating that he had lost faith in certain members of the Democratic city committee, Mayor Edmond P. Sunday, announced that he would shortly have another bake of his own, sponsored by the Talbot group of the city government.

Long Term of Service Nearing End

Joe Griffin, who presided over the Quincy House bar in the carefree days before Mr. Volstead got busy and since has served temperance beverages to thousands, ceases his service at the famous old hotel Sunday. Joe came to the Quincy House 24 years ago.

SAY SQUIRRELS ARE OVERFED

Complaining that the squirrels in the Old Granary Burying Ground are overfed, Park Department painters are preparing signs at the direction of Chairman William P. Long, warning the generous public against tossing peanuts, popcorn, bread crumbs and other dainties into the historic shrine.

While expressing the highest regard for the motives of the squirrel feeders, Chairman Long pointed out that the squirrels have buried enough nuts to last them forever. They have done so much burrowing in the burying ground that they have injured the roots of a number of trees.

A squad of men have been busy for the past week repairing the damage caused by the squirrels. In an attempt to stop the squirrels, the park painters will erect the "Please Don't Feed the Squirrels" signs in a few days.

Asserts G.O.P. Seeks to Aid N.E. in Tariff

New Bedford, Sept. 11—That unless additional schedules can be retained in the pending tariff bill in Congress little hope can be held for New England industries, was the warning sounded at a gathering of 700 Republicans here.

The speaker was Congressman Arthur M. Free of California.

"Republican leaders are fighting for the cause of New England and I believe will be successful in blocking the move of the Democratic party," he declared.

Famous Old Hostelry Goes Out Sunday

The Quincy House, famed Boston hostelry, closes its doors next Sunday.

Permanent and transient guests, many of whom have been guests of the old hotel more than a score of years, will depart and, where once were heard the voices of orators, the room clerk calling "Front," and the bum of conversation from the diners, the auctioneer will hold away.

The passing of the Quincy House, after 116 years of service, is keenly regretted by the present management, and thousands of travelers who have long disregarded the more pretentious hotels in the city for the homely atmosphere of the building in Brattle st.

It has long been noted for its large and comfortable rooms and for its splendid cuisine. Probably no other hotel in Boston enjoyed a larger patronage from the eating public. The Japanese Gardens was for many years a gathering place for late diners and after theater parties.

Like other of Boston's famous old but modernized hotels, the Quincy House is well staffed with a large number of employes who have been in regular employment at the hotel for periods ranging from six to 20 years.

Joe Griffin, who came to the hotel in 1909, presided over the bar and supervised the serving of drinks to a large patronage. Until 1919 eight men worked behind the mahogany bar, three of them being kept busy mixing while five served.

William Daughan, a familiar figure to thousands of Bostonians, has occupied the post of carriage starter at the main door of the hotel since the days when horse drawn vehicles were the means of transportation in the city.

John Regan, present manager of the Quincy House, has been in charge since 1917. He resigned his post in the Parker House to take over his present duties and his supervision has been responsible for much of the success of the Quincy House.

Miss Genevieve Bryan of Waltham, treasurer of the Quincy House Co., operators of the hotel, was appointed in 1917 and took over the executive reins in the absence of John E. Munroe, president.

The closing of the hotel will be directed by Munroe, who has completed plans for the disposal by auction of the furnishings.

Other long-term employes who will sever their connections with the old hotel are Miss E. W. McCarthy of South Boston, secretary and cashier; John Olich, chief clerk; Fred B. Woodside, maintenance superintendent, and George Osgood and the Misses Julia and Katherine Welch, housekeepers.

SMALL URGES HALF TIME CHILD WORK

Educator Favors Extension of School Period to All Municipalities

Half-time employment of children, under the continuation school law, was indorsed before the recess commission on education by Robert O. Small, head of the continuation school division of the state department of education, and others.

Small cautioned the commission that if it should make recommendations enlarging the existing period of schooling, provision should be ade to make it elastic in various municipalities, because conditions differ.

Although Massachusetts was one of the first states to put into effect the continuation school law, it is now being outstripped by educational work along this line in other states, particularly in the South, he explained.

Grosvenor Plowman placed a bare majority of the members of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts on record in favor of federal legislation enlarging the scope of the continuation school activities.

Joseph Lee, president of the Massachusetts Civic League, said the majority of employers favored the half-time idea. M. J. Downey, assistant superintendent of Boston schools, said the school committee is not opposed to the half-time proposition.

BOSTON LOUIE SKIPS BAIL

Edward M. "Boston Louie" wanted here for trial on a liquor conspiracy smuggling case, forfeited his bail of $2500 when he failed to appear before a United States commissioner in New York today.

The government is seeking to remove him to Boston to face trial on an indictment charging conspiracy to import liquor. When he failed to appear at noon, Commissioner Epstein ordered the bail money forfeited.

GREEN SHIRT AND 2 WOMEN PROVE UNDOING OF MILTON SUSPECT

OLD-TIMER IS NOT EQUAL TO HANDICAP

Mrs. "Hiker" Joy Chases Him Out of House and Phone Girl Does the Rest

Cornelius Regan, alleged housebreaker of 25 years professional experience, was today locked up under bonds of $10,000 to await the December sitting of the Norfolk County grand jury—all because two women, amateur sleuths, got on his foxy trail.

Regan was arrested by the Milton police after Mrs. William Joy of Central ave. had chased him from her home and had enlisted Miss Nora Healey, police headquarters phone operator, in the man hunt.

"He ran into the woods," Mrs. Joy told Miss Healey over the wire. "He had a green shirt, a blue suit—and a big nose."

Miss Healey was just making a note of it when she looked out the window.

"Green shirt, blue suit—and big nose." It was he.

"Grab that man," Miss Healey shouted.

Patrolman Michael Murphy, doing house duty at headquarters, made the capture.

Judge Albert E. Avery of Quincy District Court held Regan and set bail at the $10,000 figure. According to the judge, the defendant's record showed him to have been convicted of a series of burglaries dating back 25 years.

Regan is 41 years old. He said he had no home, but formerly lived in Boston.

Mrs. Joy is the wife of William "Hiker" Joy, assistant to Major Frank Cavanaugh, football coach at Fordham University.

MAHONEY O. K.'S INFANT HEALTH

Replying to S. J. Crumbine, general executive of the American Child Health Association, who, in his annual report sets Boston down from fifth to ninth place in infant mortality, Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, health commissioner, stated that Boston still leads the country in infant health, contrary to all other reports.

When told of the Crumbine report, Dr. Mahoney emphatically declared that while figures in general may show Boston's infant mortality increasing, these figures include 40 per cent non-residents of the city who come to Boston annually to avail themselves of the great medical facilities here.

The same report which sets Boston back in infant health, credits Worcest and Medford among the lowest in the country in the population group of between 25,000 and 50,000 persons.

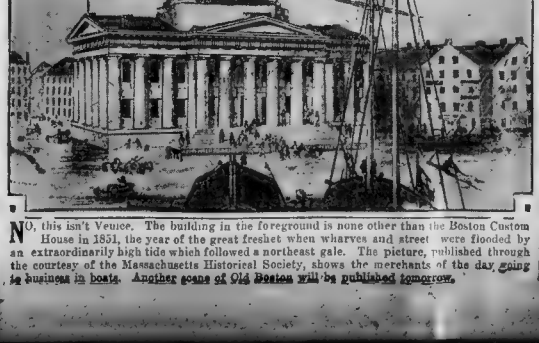
Old Boston in Pictures—No. 53



NO, this isn't Venice. The building in the foreground is none other than the Boston Custom House in 1851, the year of the great freshet when wharves and street were flooded by an extraordinarily high tide which followed a northeast gale. The picture, published through the courtesy of the Massachusetts Historical Society, shows the merchants of the day going to business in boats. Another scene of Old Boston will be published tomorrow.

SPORTS By NICK FLATLEY

College Bands Train Some Need To New Grid Wrinkle

GIVE THE BABY A SAXOPHONE

N. Y. U. band has gone training up in Farmingdale with the football squad. This is good for the neighbors up around N. Y. U., but tough on Farmingdale.

It's a new wrinkle in football, which doesn't need any. But it may have its uses. Any time a player feels like going on a toot, the coach can borrow a cornet.

NICK FLATLEY

He may be able to beat signals into his thick athletes' heads with the base drum slapper. And the moaning of the saxes, as played by collegians, surely will work up that necessary nervous tension

Colleges are like sheep in the matter of football. You can look to see all the bands migrating to the training camps. And to hear more noise than ever between halves. A way opens, too, for the unath-a-letic to make the teams.

The frails will all join shrilly and gleefully in the three long rahs for the trombone player with the beautiful curly eyes. And scouts will trail the prep schools, armed with tuning forks and Cohan sample sheets.

This and That

Sea literature flops during the football season. Jimmy Connolly spends all his time watching the Boston College team.

Johnny Risko was fined a thousand bucks for using his head the other evening. He used it on Herr Christner's schnozzel.

Jess Guilford made the best showing of the Mass. golfers at Pebbles Beach. He stayed home, so had no expense bill.

Monty Wells, Dartmouth hurdler, is going to teach at Roxbury School, the big Yale prep feeder. He should take the boys over the jumps.

They're trying to take the "love" out of tennis. The movie stars have taken it out of marriage.

Personalities

Horace Keith is doing his usual best to make the Brockton Fair track meet the biggest thing of the year. And his best IS good.

Forget the exact number, but Tom Lipton is making another last try to get the American Cup. When Sir Thomas wants something, he goes after it.

Jack Sharkey is getting a lot of boosting from up Orangeburg way. The big boy is getting popular at last. And it's time.

Bob Guild, since he posed for those football wigwags, has had two movie offers. He'd make a swell heavy.

John, our handsome barber, is betting his extra razors that the A's smack the Cubs in the world series. Which may be tough on his customers a little later on.

Did You Know?

That nobody was surprised when it was announced that the world series would start in Chicago.

That most of the officials will forget all about those signals when games get hot. And that the fans will anyhow.

That four out of five autos are wearing those "Guest of Canada" signs. There's a reason.

That it costs twice as much to send a kid to college as it did ten years ago. Ask dad.

That the bookies who take it away from the gamboleers generally toss it off in the market.

E. Keevin Keeps Busy

Eddie Keevin, who does plenty for the kids, especially the newsies, is now on the trail of the foul, which has been all too prevalent in our recent fistic affairs.

Edward has discovered a pneumatic abdomen protector, which does away with most chance of pain or serious injury from misdirected blows. He has found that the N. Y. commish approves it, and is working to get the Mass. board to make it standard ring equipment.

Would be a very good idea; a step toward doing away with the foul, except in flagrant cases. A few more of those invisible blows, and the fans will stay away, gluttons though they are for punishment.

ZITENFELD TWINS READY FOR CHANNEL SWIM

TILDEN ALMOST DEFEATED

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 11—Wilmer Allison shattered the hopes of George Lott for the national tennis singles championship, defeating him in the third round of the 49th annual title tournament, 6—3, 6—3 3—6, 3—6, 7—5.

It took the finest tennis Allison ever produced on the courts of the West Side Stadium to upset the young Chicago internationalist, who had been expected to oppose Bill Tilden in the final for the title.

The Texan was not even included in the seeded list, while Lott was placed second to Tilden among the eight best American contenders in the official ranking. Lott is No. 3 and Allison No. 5.

All the dope called for a speedy Lott victory as Allison, though victorious in the Davis cup challenge round doubles paired with Johnny Van Ryn, has not been playing up to form in singles.

The cherished hopes of Big Bill Tilden for his seventh national singles crown trembled in the balance for a few dramatic moments under the spirited onslaught of 19-year-old Frank Shields, former national junior champion in another third round match.

In the end Tilden's fighting heart and amazing stamina carried him to victory by scores of 2—6, 6—1, 14—12, 6—4. Shields weary and limping from a painful fall was hardly able to stand at the end of the two-hour struggle, while the 36-year-old Tilden was comparatively fresh.

The only third round match not concluded was that between Arnold Jones, Providence, R. I., and Dr. Carl Fischer, Philadelphia. This was called on account of rain with the score at three-all in the fifth set and will be finished today. The program of stadium matches today:

4 p. m.—Francis T. Hunter, New Rochelle, N. Y., vs. Wilbur T. Coen, Jr., Kansas City.

Gallagher was at Cambridge last week to consult with Bill Bingham regarding a job as coach of a minor sport. Bingham was out of town and no appointment was made.

Gallagher may become an assistant to Farrell or take over the training duties for the Crimson gridmen. His position will be settled at a meeting of the Harvard A. A. on the 23 of this month.

Roslindale Clashes With Quincy Tonight

By DICK McSWEENEY

"It ain't gonna rain no more."

The hopes of both Fred Mellen and Sid Paterson, managers of the Roslindale and Quincy Twi League teams, respectively, are embodied in the main theme of the popular song of yesteryear as they prepare to stage the sixth game of the Twi League championship series at Fore River Field this evening.

On two occasions rain has caused a postponement of games in this series, but these delays have only sharpened the interest of the Twi fans.

Big Ed Mullowney, who combines skill and brains to furnish Quincy with pitching skill, will be on the Granite City mound tonight.

Opposing him will be the youthful Frank Millikan of Roslindale, whose consistent slab work has won him a place in the ranks of the best semi-pro pitchers.

Neil Mahoney, South Boston's contribution to the catchers' hall of fame, will do the backstopping for Roslindale. Neil is a smooth workman and his stickwork can be compared favorably with that of Dan Shanahan whom he has replaced now that the popular Danny has departed for Maine to take up the duties of coach.

Peters, Moore, Spognardi, Harrington and Chisholm are batting well over .400 for Roslindale. Power has the highest individual average of both teams with an even .500 to his credit.

The game will start promptly at 5:30.

HUB SLOOP CAN WIN CUP TODAY

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 11—The American sloop Gypsy, owned by Frank C. Paine of Boston and sailed by the youngster, Raymond Hunt of Duxbury, won its second successive race in defense of the Seawanhaka Challenge Cup.

Getting the jump on the first leg of the triangular course of seven and one-half miles which was sailed twice around, Hunt brought the American sloop across the finish line one minute and seven seconds in front of the Scottish challenger, Caryl, sailed by Frank Robertson her owner.

The series, best three out of five, now stands: United States, two victories; Scotland, none.

The Gypsy can clinch the series by taking today's race. The course will be windward and leeward, three miles to a leg, sailed twice around, a total distance of 12 miles.

Kansas City, Sept. 11 (AP)—Gus "Dynamite" Sonnenberg successfully defended his world heavyweight wrestling title here tonight by defeating Stanley Stasiak, the big Pole, in two straight falls.

GRID OFFICIALS MEET TONIGHT

Football officials from all over New England will gather for the second annual meeting of the New England football officials' meeting which will be held in the B. A. A. gymnasium this evening at 8 o'clock.

With Walter R. Okeson, commissioner on the appointment of officials for the various college games, the principal speaker of the occasion, one of the greatest gatherings is expected.

The meeting this evening will be the first of eight such gatherings that are scheduled in different sections of the East, including Springfield, Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York.

The primary motive behind the meeting is for the interpretation of the rules and the changes as have been made since last year. Considering that New England is one of the real centers of college football Mr. Okeson's meeting will be more representative than anywhere else. Coaches in addition to officials are interested in what the commissioner will have to say and there promises to be a record gathering.

In the meeting tonight Okeson will discuss the new changes and the interpretations to be put up on some of the intricate plays that are apt to come up in the course of a season.

It is interesting to note that Okeson in his report to the football rules committee for his second year as supervisor of officials, reveals that two colleges have dropped his service and 10 additional ones have accepted it since the system was adopted.

Legal Shadows Fall on "Sunshine"

New York, Sept. 11 (INS)—Mark up another long count for the Dempsey-Tunney battle in Chicago back in 1927.

Commissioner Francis O'Neil today and forced to put up bail of $5000 each, for hearing on October 3, on a charge of transporting films of that famous "six bit not out" battle by airplane, in contravention to interstate laws barring transportation of fight films over a state line.

Detroit Team Here for 3-Game Series

By JOE CASHMAN

BUCKY HARRIS leads his Detroit Tigers to town today for the last time this season. The slugging Bengals will play single games at the Fens this afternoon, tomorrow and Saturday. There is no game scheduled in the Hub for Friday but if either of the first two games have to be postponed, it will probably be played off on the open date.

The St. Louis Browns stopped the Sox surge by grabbing off both ends of the final double-header, but that hasn't taken any of the pep out of the natives. They are as cocky as ever and confident of starting another this p. m. at the expense of the new enemy.

Joe Cashman

They took three out of five from the Tigers on the recent Western jaunt. Charlie Ruffing, Ed Morris and Milton Gaston, the three flingers who turned in the victories in that engagement, will face the visitors here, in the order named so the Cardigans see no reason why they shouldn't take the Harrismen into camp again.

JUST as Dan Howley was making his last local appearance as the St. Louis manager while the Browns were in town, so will Harris probably be making his final bow as pilot of the Tigers in the next few days.

There is nothing certain about Harris being through as there is about Howley, but it is the consensus all over the circuit that the Jungaleers will have a new boss are another season rolls around.

The Tigers have been one of the biggest disappointments of the year. The best hitting club in either league, they have never been contenders, have been out of the first division the greater part of the race, and now are in danger of dropping into sixth place.

In the spring, they were unanimous choice to finish in the first division, and many believed that the club which beat them out would win the flag.

Justly or not Harris is being blamed for the failure of the club, and the Detroit fans are demanding his scalp, so he will probably be released.

The lowly position of the Tigers, as we have pointed out before, proves that more hitting strength is needed to win ball games.

A punch is a mighty asset. With it the Red Sox, for instance, would be a first division club. But it takes more than base hits to win ball games. Good pitching and fielding are also necessary.

The Tigers haven't the pitchers. That's why they are in the depths. Almost every regular is a .300 hitter and a fair fielder, but the pitchers are unable to stop enemy batsmen making more runs that their mates.

Your fan, however rates punch above all else in a ball club, so the Tigers are one of the most popular and prosperous clubs in the game, despite their standing.

Here in Boston the Harrismen are the greatest visiting attraction with the exception of the Yanks and the same is true in nearly every town in the circuit.

So with the Sox playing great ball these days the turnstiles should click merrily as long as the Detroiters are present.

Babe Slaps Out Pair of Homers

New York, Sept. 11—Babe Ruth's 44th home run with two on base tied the score in the second game with Detroit, paving the way for the Yanks' 8 to 4 victory a moment later.

LOCAL HEAVYWEIGHT HOPES OPPONENT WILL MAKE FIGHT SLUGGING MATCH

ORANGESBURG, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The most strenuous kind of training will be my lot from now until I step into action against Tommy Loughran the night of September 26.

Jack Sharkey

I have just enough time in which to get myself into perfect fighting form for the most important battle of my career. I feel that if I conquer Loughran in decisive style, the public will recognize me as the heavyweight champion of the world. Like William Muldoon, veteran member of the New York Athletic Commission, I believe the public and the press should have the final say in naming the champion in the event I defeat Loughran impressively.

I believe I shall receive the sought for recognition with so much at stake I shall put added zip and fire into my work here at Orangesburg.

I have had the necessary ring experience during the past five years. While I am only 26 years of age, it is my intention to make the Loughran bout the great effort of my career, following my contest with Jack Dempsey.

Commissioner William Muldoon paid me a great compliment when he declared that in the first two rounds of that tussle I gave him the greatest exhibition of two-fisted fighting he ever saw. He asserted that if I had maintained the same clip for two more frames I would have knocked the Tiger out.

When I face Loughran my plan of battle calls for me to fight at the same wild clip that I showed in the early rounds of the Dempsey fight. But in this case I feel that I shall be able to maintain the tremendous pace until I have sent Loughran down to defeat under showers of punches.

THE sport public craves a knockout. This is why it was thrilled the night I had Harry Wills on the verge of dreamland when he fouled his way out the evening.

As the distance of the bout is 15 rounds I shall have plenty of time in which to beat down the Philadelphia favorite. If my tussle with Young Stribling at Miami is such had been over the 15-round route, the Georgian would never have gone the distance.

At the end of the tenth round Stribling was a sorry sight. He didn't have strength enough left in his legs to move out of the way of my punches. I doubt whether he could have lasted two more rounds.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN says he has been developing his right hand attack and that he will blaze away at my chin in an effort to win by a knockout. I hope Tommy is sincere in his promise to open up and make a fight of it. When I met Mike McTigue, another former world's light heavyweight champion, he decided to risk his all on a wild exchange of right hand socks. For six rounds Mike fought like a champion. He opened a wound on my mouth and another under one of my eyes with right hand belts. But I stood toe to toe with him in the center of the ring and eventually knocked him out.

The boxing experts have attached considerable attention to my left hand. Some of them have even said that my left is faster than that of Jim Corbett which I consider the finest possible tribute. But it was the hard socks which Tommy Wills, Maloney, McTigue and Delaney. My left hand has paved the way for the right hand socks. Left jabs and hooks have worn down the opposition, then the right hand has swept into action.

Left hooks are delivered with such quickness that the fans often fail to see the blow. But when a right hand shoots, everybody holds his breath until he sees what will happen.

If I have my way, the jam at the Yankee Stadium will be a wide open socking party. I feel that in such an event I can keep smash well on the target first.

MR. BOSTON By JACK CONWAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—Mr. Boston was talking with Bill Thomann who manages the Forest Hotel amidst the Roaring Forties.

"The town is all steamed up over the heavyweight situation," said Bill, who knows his cauliflower. "Early in the summer Max Schmeling had the play around here. Then along came Campolo and punched Heeney out of the picture. He is today the most talked of among the foreign heavyweights.

"The public is giving more respect to Phil Scott since Schmeling refused to meet him, but the boys still remember that Knute Hansen knocked him out in a round at the Garden.

"Jack Sharkey stepped into town while everybody was talking about Campolo, Scott and Loughran and he took the play away from them all. What is there about Sharkey that always keeps him in the center of the heavyweight scramble?"

Jack Conway

"JACK DEMPSEY and Babe Ruth have a million dollars' worth of crowd appeal. Big crowds follow them everywhere.

"Gene Tunney never quite caught on with the public. The fans left him alone. Gene didn't even become a public curiosity until he retired to marry Polly Lauder. The public then displayed intense interest in Gene. It wanted to get a peek at the man who started as a clerk and ended up by winning the heavyweight championship of the world and the heart of an heiress.

BILL THOMANN informed Mr. Boston that out-of-town fans were displaying a great deal of interest in the Sharkey-Loughran bout.

"Pennsylvania will send a great crowd here for the fistic," said Bill. "Loughran is the greatest ring favorite Pennsylvania has had since Lew Tendler was battling Benny Leonard. Lew twice drew around $400,000 with Leonard. A big part of each crowd came from Pennsylvania."

"I find the fans divided as to the probable winner of the Sharkey-Loughran mill," chirped Mr. Boston. "A great many folks feel that Loughran is the best fighter in the world and that he will left hand Sharkey to defeat like he has the other men he has battled. There are as many equally good judges of fistic affairs who maintain that Sharkey is too big and strong for Tommy.

MANCHESTER WINS FIRST

With Johnnie Miller pitching airtight ball, aided by his teammates in the field, Manchester drew first blood in the first game for the championship of the New England League at the Lynn Stadium, winning by a score of 9 to 1.

Miller was in rare form, setting down the Lynn sluggers with five hits.

Jack Kahn made threes marvelous catches in right field that saved Miller but when it looked as if he was beginning to waver.

The two teams will shift to Manchester where they play the second game. About 2000 fans were on hand when the two teams took the field.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

In the last lessons for beginners we discussed some details of the beginning of your back swing. There are many little points connected with this initial starting of the back swing and they are overly important because they have relation to the swing as a whole. It gets almost to this: Learn at the outset of your golf to get the club started away right and your whole swing is likely to be very good. Any old golfer can verify the truth of that. Also, if you go wrong at the start of the back swing the fault, however small at the start-back of the club, increases in importance as the back swing continues. That's why little things connected with the start of the back swing are of consequence in golf. Many players have what appears to be a fine swing, yet they score poorly. Some fundamental small fault exists of which they are not conscious. Very often this can be found in the action of the right arm. This week I want to put you beginners right on your right arm in golf, because your right arm can do you a lot of dirt in golf, believe me.

B. U. WILL HAVE NEW ELEVEN

Boston University's football followers would hardly recognize their team if the eleven which is now recognized as the varsity were to trot out on the field today to wage war against their opponents.

Only three letter men are among those making up the so-called first team. They are Jack Carnie, left end; Solly Thurman, quarterback; and Crab Walke, fullback.

Six untried men are holding down the line positions and although several veteran linemen are expected to put in their appearances within the next day or two, it is quite likely that some of the new men may win starting posts in the opening game of the season with West Point which is only ten days away.

Grid Gleanings

New York, Sept. 11 (INS)—Moving at a fast pace from the first day of practice, Columbia's grid squad will be put through its first scrimmage tomorrow. Today will be devoted to the fundamentals and a short signal drill.

Farmingdale, N. Y, Sept. 11 (INS)—The great all-around play of Herman Lamark, back on the undefeated 1928 yearling squad, has brought great joy to Coach Chick Meehan's heart. In a ninety-minute scrimmage Lamark scored twice, his first tally coming after a 28-yard spin through the line.

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 11 (INS)—Army linesmen will today continue their heated battle for Lerths on the forward wall vacated by Sprague Hall and Hammack. John Murrell, veteran back, bigger and stronger than ever, has been the shining light in practise sessions.

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 11 (INS)—Cornell will again engage in a double drill today. Coach Dobie has made no mention of lineups, but that it was far too early for the naming of elevens.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 11 (INS)—Brown football candidates will today go through their second outdoor practices of the season.

Two Matches Today for Waterbury Cup

New York, Sept. 11 (INS)—Two matches are booked for today in the play for the Monty Waterbury Memorial Polo Cup.

In one, a semi-final game, Laddie Sanford's hurricanes clash with the Greentrees. The other, a first round game, finds Tommy Hitchcock's sends point four crossing mallets with Roslyn.

Harvard Ready for Football Opening

By JOE MOONEY

Equipment for the first practice session on Monday will be given out to the candidates all day Friday and Saturday.

In the meantime the work of bringing the Stadium turf to the perfection of a country club fairway goes under the able hand and coldly discerning eye of the veteran groundkeeper Mike Dansby.

The new steel stands are rapidly nearing completion. As yet no seating plan for ticket distribution has been worked out. Carroll P. Getchell will chart the new area as soon as the seating capacity can be determined.

There is some speculation as to whether Frenchy Gilligan will be available for the first part of this season at least. Frenchy was getting in some pre-season conditioning on a farm in New Hampshire and while working on a rock pile sustained a severe injury to his hand.

At first it was thought that some fingers would have to be amputated but a second consultation with Doc Richards of the H. A. A. the former Newton High and Exeter star was assured that the injured mitt would heal normally.

PETEE WRACK IS WINNER

Belmont Race Track, Sept 11 - Six scratches did not leave much to the Twin City Handicap, feature at Belmont Park, but the three horses which did run put up a thrilling race, and the finish confirmed the high class of John R. Macomber's Petee Wrack.

This colt of Wrack carried 123 pounds over the mile and a quarter route in 2m. 3 3-5s, and beat the Whetley Stables' Distraction half a length, with Mrs. John D. Hertz's Gypsy King third, 10 lengths further back.

Manila, Sept. 11 (AP)—Governor-General Davis, donor of the Davis Cup, today expressed his intention of extending his personal invitation to Henri Cochet, Jacques Brugnon and Pierre Landri, French Davis Cup tennis players, to visit the Philippine Islands after their forthcoming tour of the Orient.

Helen Hicks Has Big Lead in Chi Golf

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP)—The 72-hole medal play derby event of the Women's Western Golf Association has been reduced to a problem of how much of a lead Helen Hicks of Inwood, L. I., will accumulate in the final 36 holes.

Cubs Need 8 Wins; Athletics Lack 5

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Cubs need eight victories to clinch the National League pennant, and the Philadelphia Athletics still are six triumphs away from the American League championship.

GRAHAM SEEKS 3RD TITLE

Aspiring to win his third ring title, having already held the flyweight and bantamweight crowns, Rushy Graham of Utica, N. Y., makes his first real bid for the featherweight championship, when he invades the hub to clash Andy Martin, New England featherweight champion at the Boston Garden, Friday night, Sept. 20.

Graham defeated Frankie Genaro for the recognized flyweight crown and later won the bantamweight title from Izzy Schwartz 15 months ago and now he is out to lift the crown from the brow of Andre Routis. Graham,

GREEN SQUAD HAS HARD DAY

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 11—Intermittent showers dampened the Dartmouth's football practice for the second consecutive day, while Head Coach Jackson Cannell tried to train his men in passing formations.

In the morning practice session the ends worked out on the tackling dummy, practicing blocking while defensive work for the ends drew the attention of the coaches for a considerable space of time. A chalk talk was in order for the backfield.

The coaches decided that the squad should have a little experience at jumping, hence a series of little hurdles, was laid out across the field at all angles. All Marines, the special delivery lad, showed up, his teammates in the department.

Jewel Ens May Lead Bucs Next Year

Pittsburgh, Sept. 11 (AP)—Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has offered the job of managing the National Leaguers next season, to Jewel Ens, who took over the reins following the sudden resignation of Donie Bush recently. Ens has not announced his decision.

Eagle Squad Preparing for First Scrimmage

COLBERT IS OUT FOR SEASON

By JOHN GILLOOLY

WITH John Dixon back in the fold, only one regular, Pete Herman, tackle, is missing from the Boston College football squad. With Peter reporting in a few days, all Jim Mc Keaney's worries about his candidates will be over.

It has been definitely learned that George Colbert will not report for football. He is the only prospect being counted on who failed to put in an appearance.

Friday afternoon will see the Boston College football squad in its first scrimmages of the year. The candidates are all ready for real warfare.

McKenney is still keeping his boys working on the grass drill, and other conditioning work but is not stressing it. He feels that practically every man on the squad is in playing shape now.

Joe is putting his team through plays, tackling the dummy, pushing the charger and giving them plenty of skull talks concerning the rules of the game and the Boston College offensive and defensive plans for the coming fall.

PLAYERS WAIT FOR MONEY

Although assurance has been given by directors of the club that all will be paid in full, members of the Brockton team of the New England League are still in town awaiting the final cash settlement from the club.

The league season closed here on Sunday without the final scheduled games being played and it seems that there was not enough money in the treasury to pay the players, some of whom are owed a month's pay and some less.

The club directors have some money ready at hand to pay off with and are awaiting word on a player deal they are trying to put through in order to get the rest of the cash to meet the payroll.

After a meeting this afternoon they announced that they expect to pay everyone on Wednesday. Some of the players need their money to pay hotel bills and restaurant bills and for their train fare home.

WOODSIES FIGHT FOR 2D PLACE

By BILL McAULEY

THE Woodsies will clash with New Bedford here Saturday and on Sunday they will oppose the Goldbugs at Kingsley Park, Providence.

This will give the Hub eleven a good chance to grab off second place which is now held by the Goldbugs.

Traveling at the same rate as they have done the past couple of weeks the Hub eleven should find no trouble in downing the Whalers here, but they will find the Goldbugs a hard foe to defeat on their own pitch.

LETTERS OF FRIENDSHIP AND LOVE -:- By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Betty Looks for Postman to Bring Them to Her

LETTERS of friendship and love!

Ordinary conventional envelopes, yes what burning messages of inspiration and intense longing they contain! It would seem as though the drab precincts of the post-office should radiate with their light of hope, promise, tenderness!

Betty watches eagerly—her heart beats faster! Time for the arrival of the postman! Ah, there he is and her letter—there it is, along with ads and bills—her wonderful letter from Bob, transforming a rainy day to the brilliance of August sunshine!

While Jill pounds her typewriter at the office, a rhythmic undercurrent runs through her thoughts: "A letter from Jack—a letter from Jack when I reach home—due today—the mail boat has docked—a letter from my dearest!"

Sometimes, the mail is too slow for modern lovers! Night-letter telegrams, long-distance telephone calls and radiograms may crowd out leisurely love letters, more's the pity! Doubtless, aviator Romeo will soon be writing on the sky, still briefer messages for modern Juliets! But it would be a sad thing to forget the art of fine letter-writing.

Here's an extract from a love-letter written in 1864, to a young husband on a trip to Washington to see the President, regarding an important business project. It seems President Lincoln granted him an interview and graciously bestowed the favor he asked.

"Dearest James," wrote grandmother, who was then a young and pretty Mrs. Newly-Wed, with flounces and curls. "Never before have I cared about President Lincoln. But now I adore him for his kindness to you!"

This sweet and individual assurance of affection is surely more flattering to the recipient than a typical modern message; written by a descendant of the couple I have just mentioned: "Lonely for you — business good — enjoy yourself — love — Hubby."

Friendship and love are most precious, so should we not take time to cultivate the art of expressing them truly through correspondence?

"I do not care for long-distance love-making!" I can hear some matter-of-fact young person exclaim. But separation at one time or another is inevitable for lovers, and how much more endurable is the preparation when exchanging letters are exchanged — how much sweeter the reunion!

"Friendship is enriched by exchange of self-expressive missives. What could be more delightful for instance, than the following extract from a letter written by the great philosopher Nietzsche at a moment when possibly, platonic friendship was gently merging into a stronger emotion:

"Dear kind Friend . . . I read your letter again and again. I almost believe I read them too often! But this new friendship is like wine—very agreeable though perhaps a trifle dangerous."

At least for me!

"But for you, also, when I think of the sort of free spirit you have lighted upon!—a man who seeks and finds his happiness in daily increase of the emancipation of his spirit. It is possible that I wish to become more of a free spirit than I am capable of becoming. So what is to be done? . . . Is their no good portrait in existence of a certain blond and beautiful woman?"

Bright! interesting, affectionate letters from loved ones must be written before they can be received. A one-sided correspondence cannot last. The next time you think with sociable and affectionate longing of an absent friend, arrange to set aside half an hour for a letter to that friend, expressive of your thought, provided there is no good reason why you should not. Such a letter should be as pleasant to write as to receive.

But—and this is very important—silly, gushing letters are far worse and more futile and dangerous than no letters! They usually are addressed to some person with whom the writer is, for the moment, infatuated.

It is well to be careful what you write. Ask yourself whether you would be ashamed to have the whole world read your letter. If you would, it is not fit for you to send.

Nothing sounds sillier than gushing love letters when the ardor of the affair has cooled. Such letters, even though they may be put away as cherished treasures, have a way of coming to light long after the infatuation has died a natural death, and bringing a laugh—if not contempt. Have you not, yourself, chuckled at over-fervent love-letters printed in the newspapers as part of court proceedings?

This warning is not against genuine sincere letters from friend to friend, lover to lover, but is merely a suggestion that you guard against writing letters laughable and dangerous because of their indiscretion, if read in a less romantic atmosphere than that in which they were written. Then you may write letters, leave out gush, silly sentimentality, scandal and indiscreet remarks.

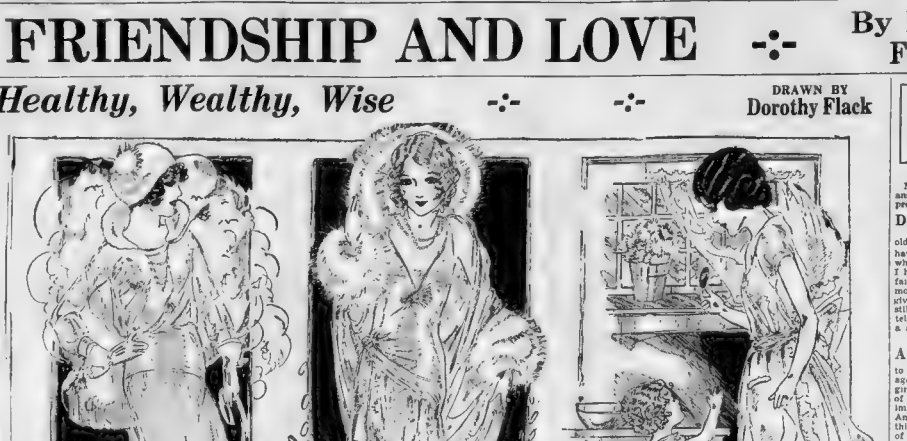
Healthy, Wealthy, Wise -:- -:-

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack



WHICH would you rather be of the three? Of course, it would be gorgeous if you could be all three—and there's no real reason why you cannot be.

Because if you have health, you have wealth—a wealth that is worth more than King Mida's riches. And if you have Love you have wealth, too.

But there are some who pride themselves on their material possessions and think neither of wisdom nor health. To them glowing health is something to be laughed at, and the wisdom that has chosen Love in preference to all other things is just too funny for words. Wealth is to them the breath of life, and nothing else matters.

Naturally, it follows that they can never hope to attract the happiness that health and Love bring. The wisdom that has chosen Love and its sweet burden is far happier than the girl whose wealth is her sole attraction and thought.

But so it goes through life. However, if you are a wise girl you'll have all three, for health brings wealth, and Love, which has been attracted by health, is also wealth. So when you grow envious, stop and count your blessings, and I'm sure you'll never wish for material things if you have the greatest of all wealth—health and Love.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Mrs. Beeckman will be pleased to answer questions from readers on problems of etiquette.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

I am a young girl, sixteen years old, and I will be seventeen soon. I have been going about with a boy who will be eighteen very soon. As I have been going about with him fairly steadily for the past six months, I feel as though I should give him a birthday present. I am still going to school. Will you please tell me what you would consider a suitable present for me to give.

READER.

A BOOK, a well-chosen book — this is the ideal present for you to give to this young man. At your age it is extremely bad form for a girl to think in terms of any kind of present for a boy other than the impersonal present of small cost. And the well-bred boy will realize this. There are wo classifications of books that are particularly appropriate for a boy—one that has to do with his hobby or hobbies, and the other a biography. And such a wealth of excellent biographies we have now! Every alert-minded boy wants to read them to see how other men have conducted their lives.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

There is a discussion in our family. Mothers and fathers are celebrating their golden weddings. On the same day a niece of ours expects to get married and my parents want the wedding to be celebrated on the same night as their golden wedding. You will do us a great favor by giving us your opinion. Same say that the sacredness of the golden wedding will be taken away by the young couple's wedding, and instead of the old couple being in the limelight, the young couple will be the center of attraction, and this is too sacred a occasion to share even by a grandchild's wedding.

Would it be all right for the young couple to be married between four and five o'clock and the older couple's reception between six and eight, or should the older couple be first?

IN my opinion such a sacred and important event as a golden wedding should be kept quite separate from any other occasion that might attract the limelight, as you say, from this event. If there is a wedding on this same day, of course that will take precedence in interest, and I think that this is a foolish thing to do.

Of course the older couple would probably be too delicately mannered a subject to such a plan, but why not have two occasions giving each its own importance? The last idea is to have the two occasions at different times of the day does not seem to me to help matters much.

JANE D.: It is customary where cards are left to be served to eat directly from them.

P A T: (a) You may decline to dance with anyone. Agreeing to it wholly a matter of your own choice. (b) The answer is the same as to (a) (c) You may say, "I do not care to dance."

READER: After a formal greeting it seems to me that it would be well to tell those that you want to see a lot of them and be very good friends. The bride's bouquet is thrown as the bride goes up the stairs to change her wedding dress or a traveling gown.

The Learned Man

By LUCY LOWELL

ONE thing man ridicules—what he does not understand—and one thing he cries down—what he is afraid of. Moved by the instinct of atavistic forebears, who believed great shouting and the beat of tomtoms proclaimed power, man laughs in the face of the unknown, thus thinking to put it at naught, and makes many loud protestations before what he fears, believing in this way to scare it out of existence.

Said Bulwer Lytton: "Man is arrogant in proportion as he is ignorance. Man's natural tendency is toward egotism. Man, in his infancy of knowledge, thinks that all creation was formed for him. For several ages he saw, in the countless worlds that sparkle in night's space like the bubbles of a shoreless ocean, only the petty candles the household torches that Providence has been pleased to light for no other purpose but to make the night answer to the day."

"Astronomy has corrected this delusion of human vanity and man now reluctantly confesses that the stars are worlds larger and more glorious than his own—that the earth on which he crawls is a scarcely visible speck on the vast chart of creation."

Knowledge is always quiet, sure of itself, confident; it needs no noise to announce itself. The broader, deeper, more profound knowledge is, the more humble it grows, realizing its limitations.

It is a little learning which is bombastic, just as it is a little wealth, the edge of social position, which is snobbish. Our true aristocrat is always simple, always democratic; he has no need for display.

DIFFERENT RECIPES

REALLY, isn't it a miracle that a busy housewife, occupied with the bringing up of her family, dressmaking, marketing, bridge playing and a good "general housework," can set plan three meals a day that have not enough monotony to really complain of. And yet, isn't it possible that most of us could really add an enjoyable note of variety to our menus if we would give a little more time and thought to them?

With this in mind, I'm suggesting today a "different" pudding and some little jelly Marguerites to go with it—also a peach of [illegible] that I think you'll like and some small chocolate cakes and fudge cake which if not entirely "different" are at least, I'll guarantee, delicious

Martha Lee

MACAROONS

Soften 1¼ tbsps. of gelatine in 2 tbsps. of cold water. Dissolve in 2 tbsps. of boiling water. Drain the juice from a pint can of peaches, and add enough water, if necessary, to make one cup. Add the dissolved gelatine, and sugar if needed; flavor with 1 tsp. of vanilla and ½ tsp. of almond extract. Cut the peaches into quarters, or if large into eighths, and place in a glass dish. Pour over the liquid jelly and set away to harden. When ready to serve, spread over the top one cup of heavy cream which has been sweetened, flavored, and beaten until stiff. Over that sprinkle finely crushed macaroons

FUDGE SQUARES

½ cupful of butter or shortening
1 cupful of sugar.
2 eggs, beaten.
½ tsp. salt.
1-3 cup pastry flour.
1 tsp. vanilla.
½ cup chopped walnut meats.
2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate.

Cream the butter and sugar together thoroughly, then add the chocolate which has been melted over hot water. Stir in the rest of the ingredients except the nuts. Mix well and spread the mixture very thin in the bottom of a well-greased dripping pan. Sprinkle with the chopped nut meats. Bake at 350 F. for about half an hour. Cut in squares without removing from the pan.

GINGER PUDDING

1 tbsp. granulated gelatine.
1 cup milk.
Yolks of 2 eggs.
½ cup sugar.
Few grains salt.
3 tbsps. ginger syrup.
1 tsp. vanilla.
½ cup Canton ginger, cut in pieces.

Soak gelatine in cold water and add to custard made of milk, eggs, sugar and salt. Strain, chill in pan of ice water, add flavorings, and when mixture begins to thicken fold in whipped cream.

JELLIED PEACHES WITH LILLY MARGUERITES

3 eggs.
1¼ cups pastry flour.
½ tsp. salt.
½ tsp. nutmeg.

Cream butter, add sugar and cream again. Add well-beaten egg yolks and mix well. Fold in flour which has been sifted with salt and nutmeg. Add flavoring. Form into little cakes about one-fourth inch thick by patting with the fingers. Place on baking sheet and bake five minutes in hot oven (400 deg.). Set aside to cool. Make meringue of stiffly-beaten egg whites, 4 tbsps. sugar and ¼ tsp. baking powder. On each cake place a small piece of stiff jelly, cover with spoonful of meringue and return to moderate oven to brown.

SMALL CHOCOLATE CAKES

An inexpensive and not very rich mixture. May be baked in small cakes and iced with either white or chocolate frosting

Put into the top part of double boiler ½ cup of milk, mixed with 1 yolk of egg. Cook over hot water until thickened, then add 1 cup of sugar. When cool, add ½ cup of milk, 1¼ cups of pastry flour sifted with 1 tsp. of soda and ¼ tsp. of salt. Into this mixture stir 2 squares of melted chocolate and 1 tbsp. of melted butter. Fill muffin pans only half full and bake about 20 minutes in a moderate oven. This rule makes 18.

When cool enough to handle, remove a small portion of center from the top of each and insert a half marshmallow in the space thus made. Then cover cake with icing.

Faithfully yours,

MARTHA LEE.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND.

NEARLY every happily married woman owes her felicity to some other woman's skill, or some other woman's misplay, or some other woman's hard luck.

Every woman who finds the perfect love or the ideal man, finds one who has already been woman-trained, at the expense of some other woman's time, labor and young illusions

Perfect lovers and good husbands, unlike poets, are not born but made. Woman-made

Among a man's loves, the first is seldom the last—and the last may thank heaven that she isn't the first

It takes one woman, and sometimes several women, to file the raw edges off a man's egotism, debarb his conceit, soften his selfishness and mellow out his nature. And the first woman who breaks his heart and, sometimes, accidentally, gets her own broken is the one who humanizes him for the woman who finally gets him.

Marrying your first love seldom makes for lasting happiness. A woman is born with the instinctional knowledge of love; but a man has to learn love's lessons and he soon begins to hate his TEACHER.

Every man must me an amateur lover, SOMETIME. And the first love, like the first car, gets all the rough treatment, the hard knocks, the dents and the smashups.

The second time a man knows better how to choose a car or a woman, knows better what he wants and doesn't want, and gives more attention to what's under the hood than to the paint, the shape and the upholstery.

He has learned how to get and keep the control, and has discovered to his amazement that neither a woman nor a motor car can be run by sheer brute force—only by gentleness skill and quick thinking.

Thus, the second or the third or the fourth love owes a big debt of gratitude to the FIRST love. In the grave with her memory lie most of a man's false illusions about himself. First love is short, sweet, beautiful—and unsatisfied. But it's a stormy voyage—of discovery!

A KISS FOR CORRINA

By MAY CHRISTIE

Chapter 14.

"That's why I'm glad to see you now," Denise answered. "You know I'm rather good at social contacts, and I was wondering if I couldn't get a job in the firm as a 'customer's man'?"

"To get accounts for us?" He wrinkled his forehead. "I daresay you could do it, right enough, but the point is, would your uncle stand for it? Personally, I don't think he would like it."

"Then maybe I could get in with another firm?" suggested Denise halfheartedly. (If she was going to work at all, she certainly wanted to be in Malvey's office . . .)

They chatted about that for a bit while they consumed duckling with green peas and new potatoes, and drank their coffee.

But time was passing. She must make sure of seeing him again—soon. (So—with the famous tenor, Gamberetti, as a bait—she told him of the proposed studio party.

"It's to be next Tuesday, Natalie de Santalvos' parties are always great fun. And you're so fond of music. You've simply GOT to come."

He looked awkward and uncertain. He had no definite date with Corinna then, but she knew that he had no class that evening, and probably would expect him.

Still to hear Gamberetti sing—it would be wonderful!

If it wasn't for a "something" that shone in the amber-colored eyes of this young woman, and that warned him that the suggestion would not make a hit with her, he would have suggested bringing his girl-friend with him.

Then he remembered that Miss Van Wyck was one of Corinna's customers . . .

That made it still more awkward. He hated himself for the sudden unjustified jar. It wouldn't do to suggest such a thing—that Miss Van Wyck might think Corinna not the proper guest in the circumstances . . .

• • • •

She was insistent. The more he hung back and hemmed and hawed the more she pressed him.

He loved music. He did want the opportunity of hearing, and perhaps meeting, the great tenor.

He was ambitious, also. He wanted to rise in the firm. It would be folly to antagonize Mr. Crisswell's niece when she was only trying to help him.

• • • •

It was just at this psychological moment that Corinna herself had appeared in the restaurant!

Thinking it over afterwards, for the stairway wasn't in his line of vision, a radio message from her must have flashed her presence to him, so that he swung around in his chair, and saw her standing

She was only there for a second. She vanished immediately.

He did not hesitate. With a quick excuse to Miss Van Wyck he was off and up the stairs after her.

She was white as a ghost. There was a startled look like a wounded deer, in her beautiful eyes, and he saw that her lips were trembling.

"Corinna!"

That queer look in her eyes!

She must have seen him in his corner with the Van Wyck girl, and misunderstood the whole circumstances of their meeting . . .

"Corinna—" he began again, breathlessly.

"It—it's all right, Malvy." She spoke in a queer staccato.

"What on earth are you doing here? What have you come downtown for?"

She freed her arm from his, and stepped back from the crowded entrance of the restaurant. Mr. Verny's. "Corinna—you come with me and have your lunch. Come on, now."

"No!"

She told herself, a hot pain at her heart: "I won't go there. I shan't let him see the contrast between HER and myself. I shan't expose myself to being patronized and snubbed by her."

"Why not? You say—you said you knew her—"

Try as she would to force them back, there was a glint of tears on her long lashes. That look in her eyes—so sad—so piercing—seemed to go down to his soul like a sword

With a proud little movement of her head, she answered "I couldn't possibly join Miss Van Wyck. It's unthinkable. To her I'm only a girl who waits on her in a shop—she'd think me vastly beneath her"

"Such nonsense, Corinna! You stay! I want you to!"

(Good Lord! What an appalling situation. Why on earth had the other come butting in this morning, to make trouble?)

Corinna said, in a level voice: "You must go back to her. She hates to be kept waiting."

CHAPTER 15

Rico looked at Pepi.

"Get her a drink," he said.

The Big Boy took Rico aside and said:

"I want to see you a minute, Rico."

Rico said:

"Listen, if you see Joe Massara tomorrow you tell him to look me up. I got something to say to that bird."

"I'll be seeing him maybe," said the Big Boy. "I got a date with his boss tomorrow morning. There's a square guy, Rico. DeVoss is a square guy all right. Never have to nudge him for dough."

Rico seemed in a bad humor.

"They tell me you lined up something good," said the Big Boy.

Rico nodded.

"Yeah, it's gonna be a money maker. Little Arnie wised me up. I'm gonna give him a split. That's the game now. Sam never had sense enough to get in on it."

"He'll only double-cross me once," said Rico.

"I believe you," said the Big Boy; then, putting his hand on Rico's shoulder, he went on: "Jimmy Come to split with Arnie. How about Blondy?"

"Arnie don't give a damn. He's all shot to pieces."

"No wonder," said the Big Boy, "with a woman like that."

Rico grinned.

"Ain't she a beaut?" he said; then his face clouded. "Won't be what the hell Joe Massara's game is?"

The Big Boy looked at Rico for a moment.

"They little hunky dance-r over at DeVess' has got him down. They tell me he's going straight."

"Yeah? Well, I'll have to go over and give that bird an earful."

"Better stay out of that end of town, Rico."

"To hell with that."

Sam Vettori came in, followed by three waiters bringing the soup.

"All right," said Sam, "we're all set."

When the meal was over the Big Boy asked Rico to make a speech. There was a prolonged clamor. Rico got up.

"All right," he said, "if you birds want me to make a speech, here you are. I want to thank you guys for this banquet. It sure is swell. The liquor is good, so they tell me, I don't drink it myself, and the food don't leave nothing to be desired. I guess we all had a swell time and I sure is good to see all you guys gathered together. Well, I guess that's about all. Only I wish you guys would'a'got drunk and raised hell, as that's the way a lot of birds get banged up."

Rico sat down. The applause lasted for over a minute. Then Otavio got up with a bottle in his hand.

"Here's to Rico and Blondy and the Big Boy."

Everybody shouted and made a grab for bottles and glasses. Blackie Avezzano fell under the table and stayed there, lying on his face. After the toast was drunk, Killer Pepi and Kid Bean began to quarrel. The Kid picked up a plate and struck at Pepi, who threw a bottle at the Kid, missing him by a fraction of an inch.

Rico banged on the table.

"Cut it out, you guys. Ain't that a hell of a way to act?"

Pepi and the Kid shook hands and another toast was drunk.

A waiter came in the door and went over to Rico.

"Couple of newspaper guys down there want to take a flashlight."

"Send 'em up," said Rico.

"We're gonna get our mugs in the newspaper, eh?" said Tony.

"Maybe we are," said Rico.

"What's the idea?" the Big Boy retorted.

"We ain't got nothing to hide," said Rico.

"Who sent you?" he asked.

Sam Vettori came up and went over to Rico.

"They're O. K. Rico," he said. "They been O. K. by me."

"Sure, we're O. K.," said the photographer, a little intimidated by Rico's manner.

"Well, spill it," said Rico, "what's the idea of the flashlight?"

"You stick to me, Boy, and we'll own the town," said Blondy Belle.

"Well, we got a section in the Sunday paper about how different classes of people live in Chicago. See? Last week we featured Lake Forest. Had some pictures of the swells, see, and the dumps where they lived. This Sunday we want your section. We just heard about the banquet they was giving you, Rico, so we kinda thought . . ."

"O. K.," said Rico, "but make it snappy."

"I'm out of this picture," said the Big Boy, rising and walking over to the doorway. Sam Vettori took his place.

After maneuvering about for a few minutes the photographer got the correct slant. He put the powder on the little tray.

"Now," he said.

Rico and Sam had thumbs in the armholes of their vests, looking very stern. There was a blinding flash. Otavio Vettori leaped into the air and crying "My God, I'm shot," fell face down across the table. Everybody laughed.

When the newspaper men had gone the Big Boy came over and put his hand on Rico's arm.

"They may pick you up on that.'

"Who the hell's gonna see it?"

"You did. Now who's gonna see it. That was a bad play, Rico."

Rico laughed.

"If they pick me up, I'll alibi them to death."

When the banquet was over Rico had Otero call him a cab. Blondy Bell was a little drunk and Rico had to support her as they went down the stairs. As she weighed about 20 pounds more than he did, this was not an easy job. As they were going out the side entrance, Flaherty left his table in the club and came over to them.

He put his hand on Rico's shoulder.

"Getting up in the world, ain't you, Rico?"

Rico looked at him.

"Sure, I know you. What's the big idea?"

"Who chase yourself around the block, flat-foot," said Blondy Bell; "I ain't getting sick of seeing bulls."

"Hello, Blondy," said Flaherty, "you and Rico hitting it off, eh? That's the old ticket. Rico's a good boy, but he's young. If they don't put him behind the bars, he'll be a man yet."

"What's the idea, Flaherty?" asked Rico.

"Why, I don't want you to forget that I'm your friend," said Flaherty. "I got my eyes on you, Rico. I like to see a young guy getting up in the world."

"Yeah?" said Rico.

The cab was waiting at the curb and one of the waiters went out and opened the door for them. Rico boosted Blondy Belle into the cab. Flaherty stood in the doorway and watched them drive off.

"The nerve of that dumb cop," said Blondy.

But Rico had forgotten Flaherty. He sat thinking about Joe Massara. Gentleman Joe was getting too good for them, eh? He was going to turn suite.

"Well, I guess not," said Rico.

CHAPTER 16

RICO woke up and looked at his wrist watch. It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon. He had slept 12 hours.

Rico lived at a tension. His nervous system was geared up to such a pitch that he was never sleepy, never felt the desire to relax, was always keenly alive. He did not average over five hours sleep a night and as soon as he opened his eyes he was awake. When he sat in a chair he never thrust out his feet and lolled, but sat rigid and alert. He walked, ate, took his pleasures in the same manner.

What distinguished him from his associates was his inability to live in the present. He was like a man on a long train journey to a promised land. To him the present was but a dingy way-station; he had his eyes on the end of the journey. This is the mental attitude of a man destined for success.

But the resultant tension had its drawbacks. He was subject to periodic slumps. His energy would suddenly disappear; he would lose interest in everything and for several days would sleep 12 to 15 hours at a stretch. This was a dangerous weakness, and Rico was aware of it and feared it.

"Twelve hours, boy," he said to his reflection in the mirror, as he stood combing his hair, "that'll never do."

He had been seeing too much of Blondy Belle; that was the trouble. Rico had very little to do with women. He treated them with a sort of contempt, they seemed so silly, reckless and purposeless, also treacherous and extremely undependable.

Not that Rico trusted men, far from it, he was temperamentally suspicious. But in the course of his life he had discovered a few men he could trust, but no women. What he feared most in women, though, was not their treachery, that could be guarded against, but their ability to relax a man, to make him soft and slack, like Joe Massara.

Rico had never been deeply involved with a woman. Incapable of tender sentiments, he had escaped the commoner kind of pitfalls. He was given to short affairs after which he looked at women impersonally for a while, as one looks at inanimate objects.

At times he would be attracted by the sight of some particular woman. This had been the case with Blondy Belle. She exactly suited Rico's tastes; she fascinated him, and for that very reason he was on guard against her.

She wanted hi mto come and live see her, but he refused. The offer galled his vanity, though, for Pepi or Joe Sansone would have jumped at the chance. But not Rico. He fought shy of any kind of ties. A slight relaxing of this principle and you are tangled up before you know it. The strong travel light.

He went to see Blondy who was pedaling a pomelo and singing loudly. The room was in disorder. Stockings hung from the backs of chairs, a dress was suspended from the chandelier on a coat-hanger, and there was a pile of clothes in the middle of the room.

"What kind of a piece is that?" asked Rico.

"That's an opera piece," said Blondy. Ain't it awful?"

"No," said Rico, I like jazz better."

She put a new oil on the pianola and Rico sat smoking, while she played it. Rico had no ear for music; he couldn't even whistle, or distinguish one tune from another. But he liked rhythm. There was something straightforward and primitive about jazz rhythms that impressed him.

"That's a good one," he said, when the roll was played through.

"No," said Rico, "I got to go."

He rose and went for his overcoat, but Blondy said:

"Aw, that Little Arnie."

"What's the idea? To hell with Little Arnie. As long as he's treated with me I ain't got no interest in him at all."

"He ain't straight with nobody. Little Arnie had designs on you, Rico, badly. At first he hadn't minded losing Blondy Belle in the least; she cost him a good deal of money and she bored and irritated him. But he had been kidded unmercifully. As he has no sense of humor whatever and was very touchy in a personal matter, this eventually angered him.

In revenge, he talked. To told all who would listen that Blondy Belle was a liar and a crook. Killer Pepi was one of the auditors and he immediately repeated Little Arnie's assertions to a woman, Blue Jay, who ran at once to Blondy Belle. Yen Little Arnie, who was 50 per cent fool, had played his hand badly.

"Come over here and sit down," she said. "I'll give you an earful."

"I ain't got no time . . ." said Rico.

"What you got on your mind?" said Rico; "spill it."

"All right," said Blondy. "Arnie's giving you a split on the house, ain't he? What's the split?"

"Sure," said Blondy, "I wasn't gonna say nothing. It wasn't none of my business, but Arnie's been peddling a lot of booze talk about me and I don't think that."

"All right," said Rico, "now you know as much, how we gonna prove it?"

"It's a cinch," said Blondy; "hand Arnie's boy, Joe Pepper, some dough and he'll spill the news. Joe hates Arnie."

"You stick to me, boy, and we'll own the town."

"He's a lot of thanks I get for it, ain't Blondy.

"Don't worry about that," said Rico, but head buzzing with projects, "you'll get something better than thank

"Wait a minute, big boy," said Blondy, "you ain't heard it all. Listen, that joint of Arnie's is worth plenty of dough. He ain't gonna give is up without a battle."

"He'll give," said Rico, "he's a yellow."

"Sure, he is. But he's tricky. Say, if you can't work it, Joe Pepper can. He's a lever. Remember Limpy John?"

"Sure," said Rico, "they bumped him off."

"Who did?"

"The cops."

Blondy laughed

Rico grinned.

"I got you."

"Be round tonight?" asked Blondy.

Rico went back to Lexington Road, this

Easy

by BEATRICE BURTON

Author of "The HOLLYWOOD GIRL"

What Has Gone Before:

Ann Marie Macy is the "easy" type of girl who is continually imposed upon. Young and pretty, she dreams of a future as an actress. Her selfish, flapper sisters, Alice and Jeanie, use her dresses for their own ends. Her brother, Howard, borrows her savings. The art course plan is shelved when Ann Marie sees that Jeanie is cheating Howard from an alliance with Leila Ingram, the town's bad girl. Even her mother's pendant is pawned to pay Howard's fare to the West when he loses his bank job. Neal Forsythe, dashing Don Juan, visiting the wealthy Lawlers, wins Ann Marie's heart. Mrs. Lawler forbids her son to further accompany the Macy girls, calling them "nothing more or less." Alice evens accounts by getting herself engaged to John Lawler. To celebrate, Johnny, Alice, Ann Marie, Neal, Jeanie and Brookie have a party at a roadhouse. Neal proposes to Ann Marie.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 21

She did her hair four times. She rubbed rouge and lipstick on her face until it was all off again.

"Don't you dare stir out of this house without mixing up the batter for waffles," said Jeanie, busy at work with a small contraption that was used for curling the eyelashes. "And please DO set the table for the four of us. You always know how to do it so beautifully."

"It might not be a bad idea to give Dad a couple of sandwiches and a cup of coffee before you go out," Jeanie went on. "Then he won't expect to eat with us four. It's a terrible bore to have him around when the boys are here."

That was at 15 minutes before five.

"Well, if I have time—" Ann Marie half promised, with her eyes on her wrist-watch. "Neal said he was coming right over."

"I'm one of those terrible people who are never on time—so you may as well get used to it," he said when he came into the hall, wearing one of Johnny Lawler's fur-collared driving-coats and a pair of his gloves.

"I shall love getting used to it!" sighed Ann Marie, looking at him with eyes like blue stars . . . Wonderful to get used to him and his ways! Wonderful to know that she was going to live with him all her life!

On the bed lay her handbag filled with two clean handkerchiefs, a box of powder, a small round mirror and an empty coin purse. Into the coin purse went the $5 bill—Ann Marie's half of the Dutchtreat money.

Seated in Johnny's roadster she took it out and rolled it up until it was about the size and shape of a cigarette.

"Thanks!" His swift eyes flashed a smile at her. "You don't mind paying your half the way, do you? Remember, it was your own idea."

"Don't say that!" Ann Marie put her hand over his mouth as the car came to a stop under the low-hanging bare branches of a willow tree in the yard of the inn. "I'm glad to pay my half! I think it's perfectly all right for a girl to share the expenses of a party with a man —especially when she works and earns money of her own the way I do."

Neal gave a wry little smile and opened the door of the car for her. "Especially when the man is too poor to pay for two—even at a hot-dog stand," he said quietly, and Ann Marie's heart ached for him.

What a shame that he should be so poor when a lot of other men, not nearly so fine and good-looking and clever—Johnny Lawler, for instance—had more money than they needed!

"Don't you care," she said to him, and getting out of Johnny's roadster she patted Neal's shoulder, covered as it was by Johnny's driving coat "Don't you mind, Neal. . . . There'll come a day when you'll be the highest-priced illustrator in the country, and then you won't have to go fifty-fifty with me!"

"You bet you won't!" the man declared. "You'll have everything that the highest-priced illustrator in the country can buy for his wife."

And on this particular rainy Sunday evening, Neal and Ann Marie had the whole big dining room of Simonds' to themselves.

An old white-haired waiter, who knew that lovers want to be all by themselves, took them to a little table in the corner that overlooked the courtyard with its wet, blowing trees and its puddles that gleamed like silver in the light from the porch outside.

Neal gave his order. Ann Marie never had heard of the cigarettes he called for until the night before when he had asked Johnny to order them for him. She had noticed that they were seventy-five cents a box.

"You don't smoke, do you?" he asked, when the waiter had brought them. "You don't realize what a treasure you are, Ann Marie, and what an economical wife you'll be—No cigarettes and no liquor to buy for you"

Ann Marie twinkled at him.

"Every time you say the word 'wife' to me, I lose my breath!" she said, and she was breathless and excited enough to prove it. "Oh, if you only knew how much I think of you, and how happy I am to be here with you!"

Right from the beginning she was more in love with him than he was with her. She had fallen in love the way she did everything else — generously, whole-heartedly, and without stint.

She had given her heart away as she had always given away things — almost before it was asked for

"Isn't this cozy?" she asked. "It's almost home-like to be here together, isn't it?"

It was. The corner was quiet and warm and cozy, with the rain hissing and gurgling outside, and the yellow lamp glowing on the table.

I shall do this for you every day—after a while," she said, beaming at Neal through the steam and the blue smoke of his cigarette. "And isn't that the cutest little coffee pot you ever saw in your life? — We shall have one just like it when we are — after a while."

She couldn't touch a mouthful of food for very happiness and excitement. She sat, glowing and quivering, chattering like a magpie.

"You know, I've been planning to go to New York for ever so long and live there, anyway," she said. "I had a lot of money saved up for it and then I — well, I had to lend it to someone. Too bad, wasn't it?"

Neal nodded

"But I'll soon have some more saved up," she went on, her eyes dancing like blue butterflies "I get three dollars a dozen for the place cards I make. Only in a town like this there aren't so many people who order them. If I were in New York I know I could get a lot of work to do."

"Why don't you go up there some day and ask for work at one of the big book stores?" asked Neal, puffing smoke at the ceiling. "I know a shop down in Greenwich Village that sells your sort of stuff, too—"

"Oh, do you?" Ann Marie fairly bubbled. "Just think! If I could be sure of some money right from the start, then I wouldn't have to have so much saved up before I start, would I?"

"No. I wish I could lend you what you need. But I can't," he said in a low tone, "you know I can't. I'm not much of a man to say this—but even our getting married would be a mistake. You'd have to stand on your own feet, in a money way, for a while, before you'd be any good. I can't marry a girl unless she's willing to support herself."

Neal turned to look at him as she said it. . . It sounded as if she were asking him to marry her, and she knew it.

The waiter brought the bill presently, and Ann Marie couldn't help seeing how much it was—three dollars and a half.

She could not help seeing that the $5 bill that Neal laid upon the tray with it was the $5 bill that she had given him. It was folded into the shape of a cigarette

For an instant Ann Marie wondered why he had not split the bill and given her back the $3 that she had given him.

He's forgotten that we're making this "Dutch treat," she decided. He's probably looked at the menu-room "He's forgotten that that was my money he paid the bill with."

The rain had stopped and the moon swam in the dark sky like a gold fish in a pool of blue-black water. It was very dark under the willow tree where Johnny's roadster was parked

"Look here," said Neal, and when she turned to him, he took her in his arms, pressing her so close to him that he hurt her. He kissed her until she was breathless and dizzy. . . . Ann Marie knew that she really sure that he loved her until a moment like this one came along and then only sure of him when they sat talking. His gray eyes seemed so cold, sometimes. Once or twice they had made Ann Marie think of Mrs. Lawler's hard, calculating eyes.

"But that's just a family resemblance," she had decided.

Certainly there was nothing hard and cold and calculating about him now as he held her tight and murmured into her hair and covered her face and neck with kisses.

They got into the car

It was warm and dark inside, with the side curtains closing them in. . . . They were all alone.

"Here's something for you," Neal said, and Ann Marie held out her hand, expecting to be given the third dollar that were left over from her share of the "Dutch treat" money.

Instead her hand touched something smooth and cold and round. Her fingers closed upon it, and it was the little fat silver coffee pot from the restaurant!

Some Fads of the Fashions

A bit shady, but they are running towards shaded materials, and accessories nowadays. Shaded hose, when the front shades from a pale beige to a deep brown at the back, or from light gray to gunmetal and so on, is undeniably smart. And there may be had to match little nose veils shading the same colors.

Paris takes to black to combat the sun's rays, and has adopted all kinds of sheer black fabrics for wear on hot days. Chief among these are black shantung, voile, black transparent woolen crepe, and frequently black georgette. Sometimes it is united with the more lively colors, but white, as usual, is the smartest trim.

You won't be a greenhorn but rather a very sophisticated person if you pour tea in a pair of green velvet pajamas. They are of a soft green shade, trimmed in gold threads, and a gold shot silk blouse makes them truly magnificent. Green velvet mules can be had to match.

When miladi retires into her boudoir she slips into a pair of heavenly boudoir slippers of orchid moire silk. This silk is washable and has a pinkish cast. A silk and velvet orchid flower is posed gracefully on the toe of each slipper.

As trim as a tick are the new tailored evening bags, which could also be carried in the daytime if it were not for the richness of their purses. One little tailored bag of honey-colored satin has a zipper fastening, as if it were an ordinary leather purse.

Taking up a rear position but nevertheless very important, is the long scarf collar worn in color contrasts to dark silk frocks. One black crepe model has a light beige scarf attached in front at neck. It crosses the shoulders and hangs down in wide streamers in back.

AUTO TREND IS SEEN TOWARD LUXURY

By FRANK R. MELOON
Financial Editor

The automobile trend is toward luxury in America, although different conditions rule abroad, according to a statement made today by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., big New England industrialist, president of General Motors.

President Sloan says: "In the past few years the trend in the motor car industry in this country has been toward cars involving greater performance—power relative to weight, greater size and more luxury of appointment, or what might be termed a trend toward the luxury type of transportation. This is perfectly natural in view of the fact that quantity production is impossible without a broad market to absorb that production, it is evident that the problem in such countries is somewhat different than it is here.

"What I mean is to obtain the largest possible volume the type of motor car must correspond with the purchasing ability of the masses. It must be the most economic type of transportation that can be developed for those and other reasons, notwithstanding the large volume of business Genera Motors enjoys and its trend of expansion, not all the potential of these markets is open to General Motors with its present type of motor car.

"The statement is in explanation of the action of General Motors in acquiring a substantial interest in the Adam Opel A. G. of Russelsheim, Germany. President Sloan adds that General Motors is in no sense transferring labor out of this country because, since the necessities of the markets are different, one operation in no sense supplants the other."

The crushing defeat of the proposed increase in the gasoline tax in Maine just another illustration of what is likely to happen to such proposals when they come to a vote of the people. Oil company stockholders are interested, of course.

It does not seem to have occurred to anyone to say the gasoline tax is unfair in that it taxes a special oasis for a privilege not exclusively for the use of that class. Motorists pay for the upkeep of highways whereon pedestrians have prior rights, and on which their property is frequently impeded by horse-drawn vehicles. The reason no great objection arises to considering privileges because all motorists are at times themselves pedestrians. A great many automobilists are also pedestrians most of the time. In some sections the horse-drawn and other slow-moving vehicle is required to keep to the right, but this idea is by no means widespread. A Massachusetts plan is to make no discrimination between the fast and the slow vehicle, but to have all, except in passing, use the outer traffic lanes.

A hundred dollars invested in the stock of one of the New York Curb listed pen companies in 1913, with dividends paid on that stock, would equal over $10,000 if sold at the current market.

Washington announcement printed in our news columns today, that the summer business has been big was, of course, true, but it did not tell the whole story. The summer resort business at Nantasket, for example, has not done anywhise remarkable, according to apparently fine weather. There is a curious explanation. The weather has been steadily fine and the traveling standpoint, but what Nantasket needs is hot evening that drive the people in droves to the beach. Then the business booms. When the weather is simply good, business is mediocre. Ice cream makers especially lament the lack of hot evenings.

New public financing in the United States during the eight months to August 31, 1929, excluding domestic and Canadian municipal, and all real estate issues, aggregated approximately $4,231,700,000 as compared with $3,696,792,000 for the same period of 1928.

The compilation includes stock issues as well as bonds and notes. Preferred stocks of all kinds were considered at par, while all no-par stocks were estimated at a number of foreign prices. The record was compiled from advertisements of syndicate offerings. At the end of the year the syndicate was assumed to be the firm appearing in the leading position in the advertisement.

Henry E. Worcester, for 20 years superintendent of the Revere Sugar Refinery, Boston, and a vice-president of that organization, has been appointed a vice-president of the United Fruit Co.

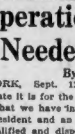
Co-Operation in America Is Needed to Meet Europe

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—Very fortunate it is for the American people that we have in Washington a President and an administration qualified and disposed to allow industry reasonable latitude to formulate and execute plans calculated to fortify our ability to hold our own throughout the markets of the world. Everywhere in Europe one senses a deep-rooted, acute, vengeful desire to hit us. European differences and animosities generations old are being subordinated to the prevailing eagerness to give America battle by concerted action.



B. C. Forbes

At banquets tendered visiting Americans and at other international functions participated in by Americans, fine-sounding sentiments of friendliness towards the Land of Stars and Stripes are glibly expressed. But we should not be misled thereby.

Europe does not love us.

Europe envies us but does not admire us. She dislikes our revolutionary business methods—yet cannot shut her eyes to the results these methods achieve. Whereas the American zestfully pursues the new and revels in changes, the typical European is satisfied with the old and is disturbed by changes.

But so "menacing" has the "American invasion" become that European leaders have opened their eyes to the necessity for throwing off lethargy, for discarding old customs and traditions and prejudices, and for seeking and adopting modern practices which Americans have demonstrated to be profitable and victorious.

* * *

Two main movements aimed at overcoming the American invasion are at this moment under way:

Britain is concentrating upon welding her far-flung dominions into a united force determined to make the British Empire one economic unit motivated by the slogan, "One for all and all for one."

Continental statesmen are striving with unexampled zeal to evolve a United States of Europe, also motivated by a desire to present a united front against industrial inroads by the rest of the world.

Far-reaching readjustments of policies will be enforced by and by to cripple American competition with home producers. One consequence of this will be the establishment of more and more American plants in foreign countries and the acquisition by American capital of many existing foreign enterprises.

This newest form of "invasion" Europe has not yet devised weapons to repel. Nor is it easy to foresee how this species of American strategy can be repelled.

Incidentally, the latest move on the International Industrial chessboard opens up the question, "How far will the widespread acquisition of American-owned and American-managed concerns abroad tend to downgrade exports of American exports, exports of goods made by American bread-winners paid American wages and belonging to families on the American scale of living?"

In this oncoming migration of American capital and American management to the ends of the earth destined to bring a corresponding migration of American citizens — American executives, American craftsmen, American salesmen?

* * *

* * *

Although we hear very little talked about in this pile of the Atlantic, and although the subject is not featured by European newspapers, the traveler through Europe who mingles with all classes discovers that other nations are even more aggressive concerning Germany's looming comeback.

War-bred hatreds have subsided extraordinarily. German goods appear to have become as acceptable as American goods in most lands. But at the same time there is harbored a widespread feeling that Germany will repeat and probably excel her prewar achievements in chemistry, in invention, in science, in industry, in shipping. Germany, it is noted, has already won the blue ribbon of the Atlantic, and it is generally that efficient she constructed the airship which has performed the unique feat of encircling the globe in 20 days.

* * *

Verily, this is a time for the exercise of the utmost American vigilance and the utmost co-operation between industry and government and between American employers and employes.

'PLANES SOLD 'ON TIME'

Merchants & Manufacturers Securities Company has organized a new department for the handling of time sales of aircraft, according to an announcement today from Arthur Greene, president of the company. As the first step in establishing this department, the company closed a contract with the Great Lakes Aircraft Company of Cleveland, Ohio, to finance all time sales of that company.

It is understood that the company's entry into the airplane instalment selling field was made possible by an increased line of banking credit provided as a result of the purchase by Arthur Cutten and J. Fletcher Farrell of a substantial interest in the company.

"We are confident that the airplane industry has a bright future and that there is a large field for our services," Mr. Greene said.

Merchants & Manufacturers Securities Company purchases obligations covering instalment sales of varied articles. One commercial accounts, acceptances, notes receivable are also handled by the company.

DINE AND DANCE
WHERE YOU GET GOOD FOOD, MUSIC, VAUDEVILLE AND DANCING

Gala Anniversary at Chop Stick Cafe

Gala First Anniversary will be celebrated at the Chop Stick Restaurant, 353 Huntington ave., tonight. Valuable prizes will be presented to holders of the lucky numbers to be distributed at the celebration. Free souvenirs and many noise makers will also be distributed. This promises to be one of the biggest and funniest celebrations in night clubs this year. There will be three big cabaret shows daily featuring the "Manhattan Revue" direct from New York, and Ben Wilcon and his orchestra playing a number of his own compositions.

Ben Wilcon

Dance Contest for Patrons of Cafe

Chin D. Young, proprietor of the Symphony Restaurant, 253 Huntington ave., is offering for the approval of his patrons a new collegiate dance contest starting tonight and continuing every Wednesday and Thursday evenings. This will afford patrons the opportunity to witness some of New England's leading dancers in action. The interior decorations have been changed, making this one of the coolest restaurants in Boston. Perley Stevens and his famous recording orchestra were received with great applause at the opening last week. Gordon Graham, master of ceremonies, continues to please the patrons with his crooning songs.

Cheer Jimmy Gallagher

Opening of Barn Cafe Big Success

Many were turned away last week at the opening of the Barn Cafe, 336 Newbury st. Owing to the tremendous rush and large number of reserved tables the management regretfully turned away many at an early hour. Pleasing compliments from the patrons were made of the interior decorations and also the decorations on the front of the cafe. Harry Wiseman and Flora Fontaine, marathon dance champions, have been engaged for an indefinite period and have already made a pleasing impression on the patrons. A new policy of having hostesses has been introduced at the Barn this year with the coming of Vera Oliver and Alice Nelson, two charming young ladies who will assume this part in the entertaining. Both girls are well known in Boston night clubs and are local talent. Music will be furnished by the "Barn Syncopaters" who play for the three cabaret shows nightly.

NEWS-VIEWS OF MODERN HOMES

FINE POINTS OF MODERN HOMES

By BETTY BONNELL

Nothing more than the first cool breeze of September is needed to remind us that summer draperies, slip covers and the like have had their day. Though they were lovely they lacked that note of luxury and richness which does so much to necessary to the decorative scheme during fall and winter days.

So it is that silkier fabrics, heavier and more wonderful colors become in evidence and suggest themselves for a place in the Modern Homes I have visited. As I note the more elaborate patterns I am impressed with a sense of distinct improvement. The more formal curtains for fall, the new cushions and general refurnishing have put in their insistent claim for attention in the light of the modern trend in homemaking.

Fascinating things are being done with modern fabrics. I have found that by merely changing the draperies, an entirely new effect can be developed and I am unable to identy my own possessions as "the same old things."

So the rooms of a modern home can be made to positively glow in autumn colors. Lustrous textures such as damasks, chintzs, antique satins, brocades and crewel embroideries all serve to change interior appearance for the better. Interior decoration of this character has become a welcome science among those who feel the need of new backgrounds with the changing of seasons. It has been my actual experience to note the transformation of mediocre rooms into charming and soothing subdivisions of a home, where comfort is the predominating factor. Good taste of course is paramount.

Imagination, individualism and vision are important supplementary assets that make a home decoration effort supreme in effect. In choosing new winter draperies, both for beauty and colorings, many Boston home lovers rely on the services and technique of Miss Helen Sacker of 177 Tremont st., with whom I have visited on the all important subject of interior decoration. She very happily discussed selections of taffetas, brocades and countless other fabrics with me. I do not wonder that her popularity is wide not only in Boston, but throughout New England.

WELL BUILT HOUSE, WITH PLEASING ROOF LINES

By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

THE long sloping lines of the roof give this house, A-63, a pleasing character, and with the hood that extends across the front, just above the first story windows, a strong horizontal effect is obtained that tends to lower the appearance of the house and at the same time to increase the apparent length.

This gives a front of good proportions that is not stilted and in no way suggestive of the four-wall-and-roof "box" that is so often characteristic of small two-story houses.

To further this pleasing horizontal effect the windows are arranged in groups, symmetrically placed. Most striking is the group of five large windows in the first story that center in the living room, opposite the fireplace, giving a most unusual wall treatment and making the room bright and attractive.

A flower box extends the full length under this group of windows, offering a tempting setting for geraniums and hanging vines where they will show to the best advantage.

The first story walls are of stucco and hollow tile, giving a most effective background for planting and lending variety to the exterior in the contrast of both color and texture and plain wall affords in relation to the shingle walls and roof above.

A small reception hall, a living room, a dining room, kitchen and attractive living porch complete the first floor. This porch has a cement floor and the openings are so arranged that the enclosing of the porch in the winter months is a most simple matter, giving another room and one that is delightful to live in.

On the second floor are three good size bedrooms and a bath. Closet space is not lacking. All of the bedrooms have group windows

PAINTING HOME IS TASK FOR EXPERT

A can of paint and a brush, or a number of cans of paint, with many brushes, is not all that is necessary to make an exterior painting job complete and satisfactory.

Painting an exterior was a task that home owners themselves figured easily done at one time, with the result that many years of unsatisfactory results have taught people generally that this important work should obviously be done by a craftsman, expert in his line.

There are many points to be considered. Namely the treatment of the entire exterior, which includes such factors as type of dwelling, location as it relates to and is affected by weather and the elements, as well as an endeavor to conform somewhat to the general treatment of other homes in the vicinity.

Conditions often make it advisable to refrain from white, when perhaps the owner might have a preference to white. Experienced hands in exterior painting have on many occasions demonstrated clearly to an owner just why white would prove not only unwise but costly.

The surface to which paint is applied is perhaps the most important factor with which those planning to paint are confronted.

All in all, exterior painting is an important phase of modern home painting and the fact is becoming appreciated to a greater degree than ever before.

HOMES SOLD IN DORCHESTER

Charles E. Ryder has sold to Michael Costello the new single frame dwelling at 37 Glide st., Dorchester. This property is located on 4171 sq. ft. of land and is assessed for $5100.

The three-family frame dwelling at 35 Buttonwood st., Dorchester, standing on 2954 sq. ft. of land and assessed for $5000, has been sold by John Sullivan to Dominic Slohuly-nek.

The sale has been recorded of the three-family frame dwelling at 24 Sumner rd., Dorchester, situated on 3200 sq. ft. of land and assessed for $8000, from Cornelius H. Buckley to Caleb A. O'Leary.

Patrick F. Purcell has sold to Nicholas Ventula the two-family house on 3400 sq. ft. of land at 45 Buttonwood st., Dorchester. The property is assessed for $4000.

Sells Atlantic Home at Auction

George W. Judkins has sold at public auction for Lillian L. Stimpson, the frame dwelling at 43 Conant rd., Atlantic, with 2150 sq. ft. of land. All is assessed for $5000 of which $1200 is on the land. Benjamin A. Wyatt purchased for a home.

STAIRWAYS ARE IMPORTANT

Of recent years, one of the outstanding units of home interiors is the stairway. It has been but a few years when stairs were merely a means to the upper floors and were often not constructed so as to afford any touch of beauty whatsoever to the home.

Not so today, modern trends are continuously striving to make stairways attractive. It so happens that most stairways are now found prominently in the foreground upon entering the modern home foyer. The artistic planning and harmonious intent, the architect of today realizes with increasing emphasis, the fact that stairway can be made friendly and inviting as well as strong and enduring.

We find as a result, the newel, the balustrade and the spiral handrail stairway, all possessing graceful attractiveness and with no need for sacrificing lasting strength.

Good materials, fine workmanship and a wide selection of designs have brought the stairway into its own as an important consideration in the construction of modern homes.

Quincy Firm Sells Coddington Units

There is to be a big Navy dismantling sale conducted at Coddington in the near future. Importance is attached to the sale by many who were able to secure building materials at the last event of the kind held a year ago. The sale will consist of some 600 buildings, barracks, shops, warehouses, refrigeration plants, officers' quarters, etc., from which materials for home construction will be bought by many.

The dismantling and conduct of the sale is to be executed by L. Grossman & Sons of Quincy under whose supervision the sale was handled last year. The work was obtained through bids to the Navy.

When dismantling again begins, nearly every conceivable class of home building material will be available. Among the materials are lumber, doors, windows, heaters, pipes and countless other units of equipment. It is expected that throngs will attend the dismantling sale at Coddington Point when the operations get under way.

Coolidge Corner Block in Transfer

Elizabeth C. Hyland has sold to William H. White and William E. Stearns, trustee, the entire block in the Coolidge Corner district of Brookline, at Harvard and Babcock sts.

The property comprises a modern two-story and basement store and office building. A large portion of the ground floor is under lease to the United States Post Office and the entire second floor is rented to the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Old Floor Scheme Is Again Popular

One of the popular modes in laying floors in the modern home is the wide oak plank with oak pegs. This effect has been recently introduced by prominent architects over the country.

The planks are securely nailed or screwed in place, while the decorative pegs serve only to imitate the old time method of fastening floors to joists.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Mr. Arthur J. Abbott, 85, Horsleton, Mass., says—"I had stomach trouble for about 20 years and was told my trouble with my gall bladder. I had been treated by a number of doctors as well as at hospitals, but I had a good appetite and what I ate did not agree with me. I would have severe spells of indigestion, acute pains and vomiting spells. I read of Dr. Walsh and the many testimonials which were printed about patients suffering from chronic trouble like that I had and decided to go to Boston, see him, and had him treat me. Now I am all right again and glad to testify to the skill of Dr. Walsh in the successful treatment of troubles such as I suffered from."

Steady-Going Maine

Unconvinced by Insull Argument, Made Suspicious by Insull "Publicity," Votes "NO" on Power-Export

The vote by which the people of Maine decided on Monday to hold fast to the Fernald law and prohibit the exportation of their hydro-electric power implied no lack of confidence in President Wyman of the Power Company or respect for the opinions of college presidents, mayors, legislators and philanthropists who lent their names to the campaign for export.

Two things, more than any others, contributed to the defeat of the Insull organization:

1—They failed to prove their case. They neglected to answer old steady-going State of Maine's natural questions: "Why the rush? Why should we surrender our water power NOW? How can we lose if we wait 10 years more? How can sending power OUT of the State hasten the day when electricity will be brought to the 45,000 farm homes which still are without it?

2—The Power Company let its publicity department run away with it. Pro-Export stories on every page of the newspapers, day after day over a considerable period, together with great double-page advertisements, made the men of the farms and the villages apprehensive. It was plain that someone was spending money like an intoxicated seafaring gentleman. Maine was puzzled.

In Maine politics, the defeat of "export" is hailed as a victory for former Governor Ralph O. Brewster, soon to be a candidate for the United States Senate against Mr. Gould of Aroostook. Mayor John Wilson of Bangor is another whose ambitions may prosper as a result of this rout.

The State's youngest daily newspaper, the Evening News of Portland, comes out of the contest with a record for the successful championship of a popular cause which had few if any other friends among the journals.

Anything But Thought

That's TOO Tiresome

(Copyright, 1929)

The tastes and pleasures of human beings change little from century to century. Romans gave parties exhibiting fights of strange beasts from Africa and Asia, and fierce blond men from the north killing each other.

We have stopped killing for amusement and gate receipts, unless it happens accidentally, in a "legal" prize fight.

But in some ways our parties are as nearly like the old ones as the law will allow.

You read of one party that included for the guests' amusement Hindu musicians with native instruments, an Egyptian snake dance, several professional wrestlers, a clown act, etc.

Anything that will take the place of thinking and intelligent conversation is appreciated.

"Anything but water," said the German comedian, asked what he would drink. "My weak stomach can't endure."

If Mosquitoes Were Killed

The Forty-eight States Could Do It

(Copyright, 1929)

A division of a nation into separate States, with separate governments, has its DISADVANTAGES as well as its great advantages.

If all the States would unite in one campaign to destroy mosquitoes it would be possible to destroy them all.

But one place destroys them while another place encourages them. When they are discouraged in one place they travel on the inside of automobiles and railroad trains and soon re-establish themselves elsewhere.

Co-operation among States, directed and encouraged by the National Government, is what the country needs. Imagine the entire country free of mosquitoes, free, in consequence, of malaria and all danger from yellow fever.

That COULD be accomplished if all forty-eight States and Uncle Sam would work together. It's an engineer's job. President Hoover might do it.

Don't Mind Him, Teacher!

"The Class Will Be in Order"

The professor who startled the American democracy a month or two ago by advising college men to be snobs has crashed the front pages again, this time by discovering innumerable ills in our system of education and placing the blame upon our WOMEN teachers.

Hear him:

"For half a century the largest part of our young people have been trained exclusively by women teachers. The faults I have been speaking of are the faults of women teachers . . . Our American thinking is feminine thinking."

Yes? Produces a lot of "sissies," is that what you are trying to say, professor? . . . Well, there was the World War.

ONCE-OVERS

Of course, you have your little family quarrels. Who doesn't? But why stay grouchy for several hours or even days afterward?

You think your life partner unreasonable; she reciprocates.

But are you as easy to live with in peace and harmony as you imagine?

There is a contributing cause when husbands and wives quarrel frequently.

You may not engage in quarrels to the extent of an exchange of unpleasantries, but you may refuse to talk and be disagreeable for days.

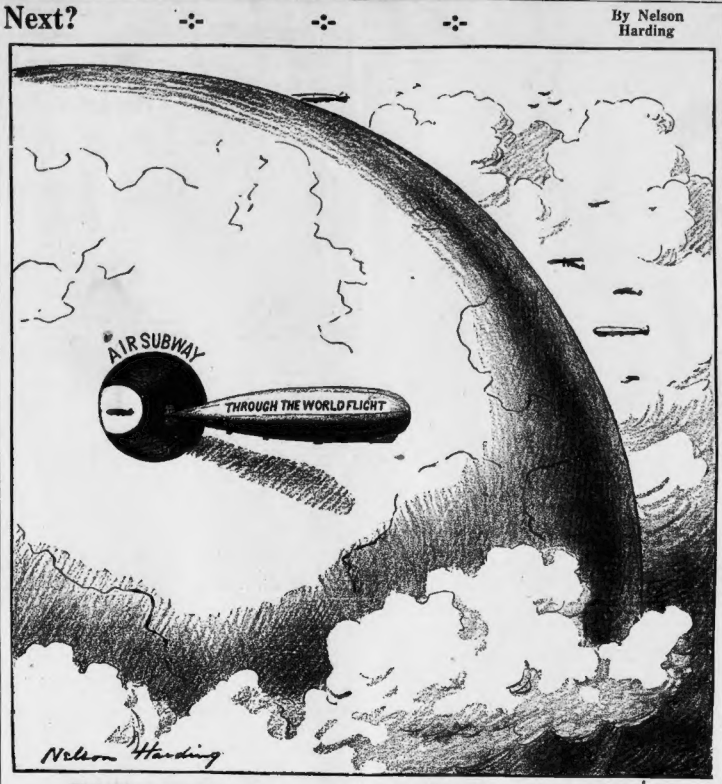
Next?

By Nelson Harding



What next may we expect to see
In man's conquest of space,
And greater triumphs over time
As faster grows the pace?

What seem fantastic dreams today
Tomorrow may be facts;
And wonder upon wonder grows
As mankind THINKS and ACTS.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

DOES Bobby Jones have any fun playing golf?

The boy is so mechanically established that every tee pole is perfection plus. He knows not the happiness of the vagrant slice to windward.

When a duffer steps to the tee he is in for some novelties and surprises. He never knows whether he is going to play golf or croki nole.

That's where we have it all over the experts. When we swing a club we never know which is going furthest, the club or the ball.

Does Jones know the fatherhood of the replaced Divot? Has he ever strode in dignified limps toward a small subdivision of real estate? Has he ever picked it up with an air of dufferish proprietorship and then paraded back again with all the honors of war?

Has he ever replaced that divot back in its nest? And then patted it tenderly in the face? He has not.

Has he ever spent three days in a bunker with an ingrown pride that prevents you flying the direction flag upside down as a distress signal?

He has not. Has he ever got a sunstroke playing winter rules in August? He has not.

Has he ever waved a twosome through a threesome and a foursome toward a well-filled locker? That's his business.

Maybe Jones and the other experts have fun. But not on the links. When a man gets too good, it's time to quit.

For the next few decades, we intend to retain our steerage membership in the Outdoor Bums' Association. We can't keep up with the Joneses.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

CLYDE'S lost his job again. Losing his job is the best thing that boy does.

It's hard to understand this, when you first meet him. He's a wonderfully likeable youngster handsome, jolly, clever—can turn his hand to anything. A bit spunky, perhaps—but you admire spunk.

He's quick to get ideas—does his work easily and well—is fau of enthusiasm and clever stunts. Runs things so finely, in fact, that the boss sits back with a sigh of relief and lets him do it.

But pretty soon his enthusiasm slackens. He begins to loaf a bit—comes late to work—is sloppy about details. That's natural. Any kid does that. The Boss decides that Clyde needs a little friendly advice and calls Clyde in.

IMMEDIATELY THINGS THICKEN.

Clyde is no longer an affable employe. He becomes an Insulted Gentleman — resentful, suspicious. What on earth ails the youngster?

The truth is that Clyde is one of that large company of young sprouts (both male and female) who start out in life with the determination that NOBODY'S GOING TO PUT NOTHING OVER ON THEM. They've listened to the snarls and sneers of disgruntled older workers and they've made up their minds that the world is filled with industrial Simon Legrees who are waiting to do them dirt.

NOBODY'S GOING TO DO THEM DIRT, NOT IF THEY KNOW IT! NOBODY'S GOING TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THEM, JUST BECAUSE THEY ARE POOR. THEY'LL SHOW 'EM THEY'RE AS GOOD AS ANYBODY. AND IF THE BOSS DOESN'T LIKE IT, HE KNOWS WHAT HE CAN DO ABOUT IT!

As a consequence, the first time their work is criticized all their latent fury is aroused.

"He can't talk to me as if I was his hired man," boasts Clyde.

Perhaps it isn't criticism. Perhaps they have been asked to do something outside their regular schedule. Then, if possible, they are even more bitter. Do that other guy's work? Stay over time? Not they! THEY CAN'T PUT THAT SORT OF STUFF OVER ON THEM! THEY'LL DO JUST WHAT THEY'RE PAID FOR AND NOT A DAGGONED THING MORE.

They've a "chip on their shoulder." And they keep that chip on their shoulder until they walk out or are fired. Which is usually pronto. After which they go around boasting how the Boss tried to get by with something and couldn't.

America is full of Clydes—and getting fuller. They're one of the products of our much advertised American liberty and equality. Equality, to them, means the right to spit in anyone's eye. Liberty means the right to do their work as they darn please.

They're also the product of bad home training—the children of disappointed, envious, resentful adults who feel that Ifs has gypped them. They have passed on their feud to the youngsters, implanted their malice in their spirited young souls. With the results like Clyde.

And yet the young Clydes make our best workers, properly trained. It might be a good idea to have courses on business ethics in our schools. Show them that freedom carries with it high responsibilities —make their pride a constructive rather than a disruptive force. SHOW THEM WHAT THEY'RE PUTTING OVER ON THEMSELVES.

WORDS OF WISE MEN

When you know the failing of a man whom you wish to please, you must indeed be very clumsy if you do not succeed.

— Le Sage.

This is the comfort of friends, that though they may be said to die, yet their friendship and society are, in the best sense, ever present because immortal.

—Penn.

Men who are engaged in settling difficult questions should be devoid of hatred, of friendship, of anger, and of soft-heartedness.

—Sallust.

You better live your best and act your best and think your best today; for today is the sure preparation for tomorrow and all the other tomorrows that follow.

—Marthineau.

—La Rochefoucauld.

—Browne.

It is the province of knowledge to speak, and it is the privilege of wisdom to listen.

Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

ONLY the hilltop can show it all—
All the country your path led through,
Past meadow, lowland and waters fall,
Here, and here only, the road is plain
And you see how it led aright
Over mountain, defile and plain
To the peace of this sun-swept height.
Touched by shadow sometimes you went,
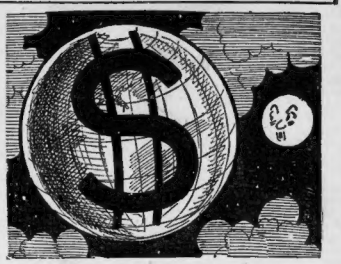
Yet never, ah, never! quite content
Till you climbed to this land of dawn.
Only from hilltops of life can you trace
Clearly the way you came,
Wilderness, desert and rock-strewn place
Led you up to greet dawn's fair flame.

Long May It Stick

A Healthy Sign

(Copyright, 1929)



THIS WORRIES AN ITALIAN EDITOR. BUT NOT US.

An able Italian newspaper published in Florence, called Il 420, is much worried about the power of America's dollar and prints this picture of a great dollar mark covering the world.

We must confess that this dollar sign seems to us quite healthy, normal. It does not worry the United States.

In fact we wish that the sign might spread, in the form of roubles, lire, francs, marks, pound sterling, Chinese "cash," etc., to all parts of the world.

Wall Street will not swallow Europe, although it will make a profit out of Europe, as it makes a profit out of everything it touches.

On the other hand, intelligent Europeans know that to MAKE A PROFIT you must CONFER A BENEFIT.

This dollar mark is a sign of PROSPERITY, covering the United States, although not all the world, unfortunately.

The United States hopes that the sign will stick. It WILL do so if the people of the United States have common sense and big financiers can be persuaded not to eat up prosperity with usury.

There was a time when only one workingman in the United States was able to earn ONE DOLLAR A DAY the year around. He was a carpenter in New England.

There was a time when a President of the United States complained that the country was going to the dogs because, to get a really good worker, you had to pay him almost one hundred dollars a year, less than THIRTY CENTS A DAY.

And you must have a LEISURE class in order to have a THINKING class.

That statement may annoy some, but it is true.

By leisure is not meant IDLENESS, but reasonable time for thought, and for the working out of plans that thought suggests.

Long may this dollar sign remain, and may the people of this fortunate country gradually become worthy of their possessions, their 25,000,000 automobiles, their heaven knows how many radios, vacuum cleaners, electric washing machines, savings bank accounts and all the rest.

No nation has been blessed as we are blessed.

None has so great cause for gratitude.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—The metropolis has many human symbols of stark tragedy who only appear in public veiled, walk deserted streets after nightfall or remain in total seclusion. They have been graphically described as The Army of Living Dead. Many were once prominent.

There is a financier, drenched in the backwash of a scandal in red headlines a dozen years ago, who is never seen on the streets in daylight. But in hours shortly before dawn is frequently seen by nightwatchmen slowly walking past the building where he was once enthroned.

A late comer to the theater now and then is a veiled lady of commanding figure who patronizes only playhouses with curtained boxes. She purchases the entire box for herself and nurse. Her face is ghastly with splotches of purplish green lumps, the result of a bungled beauty operation.

There is also a lady of culture and rare beauty who often goes to symphonies and other musical events in a closed cab. She has a nervous and disfiguring twitching of her face. Many years ago she was looking out the window of her home for her brother and saw him assassinated.

Another feminine figure often seen in Central Park after dusk has prematurely white hair, a youthful face and dresses severely in plain black. She seems eternally lost in reverie. On the night of her wedding she was accompanying her husband to a pier to sail to Europe.

Near 14th st. he excused himself on the plea of going to a drug store to attend a neglected telephone call. She never saw him alive again. He went into an areaway and slit his throat. It developed officers awaited him at the dock to arrest him for a gigantic theft.

Innumerable sons of rich men have valets who do all their telephoning, clothes selecting, arranda and in many 'nstances much of the thinking, if any. The most expert valets are said to be Koreans trained under the rigid discipline of army officers in the Philippines. They are paid from $150 to $200 a month with board and, of course, the master's castoff garments.

The best of the recent valet stories concerns the young blade whose Dad grew rich all of a sudden. He acquired a valet who was a whiz. The youth did absolutely nothing for years. The other day while the valet was absent, a door in his apartment blew open. The youth got up and closed it exclaiming: "Just like old times!"

Valets prefer to be known by last names. And one who knows tells me there is nothin' valets resent like easy familiarity. Not because of the familiarity itself but because they know it breeds the inevitable contempt that will soon cause them to be hunting a job.

My awe of valets is profound. Their superiority and stand-offishness are too much for me. Impleton who used to sit in the lap of Jake, the hired man, for the Saturday drive to town, can think of nothing requiring such courage as to snap fingers at one and cry sharply: "Benson, my hat and stick!"
